Nixon will release 'evidence' next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential counselor Dean Burch said today President Nixon will turn over "a massive body of evidence" to the House Judiciary Committee next week which he said should clear up the Watergate controversy. "Early next week, when the President responds to the committee's subpoena, a massive body of evidence will supplant charges and allegations and innuendo," Burch said in a luncheon speech to the Republican National Committee.

"And out of this factual record the whole story will emerge and the whole truth become known," Burch said. "That body of evidence will be substantial," Burch said. "It will be relevant. It will be compelling and persuasive. I genuinely believe, beginning early next week, that the end of Watergate will be in sight."

Burch gave no particulars on just what would be turned over to the committee, which is studying impeachment motions against the President and which has subpoenaed tapes and documents relating to 42 White House conversations in connection with the Watergate investigation.

Earlier, party chairman George Bush said he was confident "the President is telling the truth about his lack of involvement in the whole be-damned (Watergate) mess."

Meanwhile, President Nixon's handling of his gift of personal papers for tax purposes has emerged as a major area of inquiry by the Judiciary Committee's impeachment staff.

Chief Counsel John Doar disclosed Thursday the committee intends to conduct a full investigation, including submitting written questions to Nixon, to determine whether there was criminal fraud in his 1969-1972 tax deductions for papers donated to the government.

The Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation recently concluded the deduction was improper and the Internal Revenue Service assessed Nixon for $432,787 in back taxes. But there has been no previous congressional effort to determine whether fraud was involved in the preparation of the returns.

The tax matter takes its place along with the Watergate cover-up, the activities of the White House "plumbers" unit, settlement of the ITT antitrust case and political contributions by the dairy industry. Howard Hughes and Robert Vesco as the chief items on which the impeachment inquiry has settled.

Doar submitted a status report to the committee Thursday listing 17 allegations that are no longer under investigation because there is insufficient evidence to support them.

Most of them include allegations that the White House used executive agencies for political purposes and two others deal with the impoundment of congressionally-appropriated funds and the dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

A decision on whether to keep the secret bombing of Cambodia on the list of possible impeachable offenses will be made after the release, expected next week, of a Senate committee report on the subject, Doar said.

Jury still deliberating Mitchell-Stans charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine men and three women studied the fate of John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans today, trying to determine whether the men whom President Nixon picked to run his campaign are "liars under oath."

The U.S. District Court jury, the first to be presented with criminal charges against present or former members of the nation's Cabinet since the 1923 Teapot Dome scandal, spent four hours Thursday night in its first deliberations.

They had spent the remainder of Thursday listening to Judge Lee P. Gagliardi read 137 pages of instructions and to the government's summation of criminal conspiracy and perjury charges against Mitchell, the former attorney general, and Stans, the onetime commerce secretary.

The jurors, who had listened to eight weeks of testimony and lived in court-ordered sequestration, received the case with these final words from the prosecutor — "These men, these defendants, are accused of giving false testimony before a grand jury, not just once, not just twice, but many times."

Forewoman Sybil Kucharski, a brown-haired bank teller, said the panel would keep a 9 a.m.-9 p.m. deliberation schedule. After their four-hour deliberation Thursday night, U.S. marshals escorted them to their hotel.

Asst. U.S. Atty. John Wing, who presented the government's case in the 10-week trial, described Mitchell, 60, and Stans, 66, as "liars under oath" as he wound up his 6½-hour summation that began on Wednesday.

Mitchell and Stans, who left the Nixon administration in early 1972 to run the President's re-election campaign, are accused of conspiring to derail a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in return for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon campaign.

They are charged together with one count of conspiracy and two counts of obstruction of justice. They are each charged with six separate counts of perjury.

Eagleton files for re-election

ST. LOUIS (AP)—An election campaign with a limited budget and statewide debates was proposed today by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton as he announced that he would seek re-election to a second term.

Eagleton proposed a series of statewide broadcast debates against Thomas B. Curtis, who announced earlier this week that he would seek the Republican nomination, and proposed that he and Curtis agree to a limit on campaign expenditures.

As proposed by Eagleton the limit on campaign spending by both senatorial candidates would be $300,000.

Citing a study by Common Cause, a citizens group, Eagleton said research "showed that incumbents received twice as much money for campaigning expenses as challengers."

"It should be to Mr. Curtis' advantage to limit spending," he said.

"We can run a very rational campaign within reasonable limits. Newspaper advertising I would certainly not deprecate. Billboards are fine. And I would say a mailing campaign is all right" he said.

"Missourians have a proud history of leadership in public affairs," the Missouri Democrat said.

"I believe that we who seek high office in this most difficult of years have a duty to undertake a campaign that will work to restore the trust and confidence so

Deficit in U.S. trade balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sharply higher cost of oil imports pushed the United States trade balance into deficit in March for the first time in nine months, the Commerce Department reported today.

The department said imports during March exceeded exports by $171.3 million. This compared with a surplus of $213 million in February. The country's trade still is in surplus for the year by $685.6 million.

The March deficit was attributed almost entirely to a 17 per cent increase in the cost of imports of foreign oil. This re-

Kissinger defends U.S. foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today conceded President Nixon's impeachment problems could affect foreign policy over the long run, but said they have had no impact so far.

Kissinger, at a wide-ranging news conference, stressed particularly that the Soviets have not made "exorbitant demands" on the basis of any notion that the Nixon administration is weakened by the ongoing congressional impeachment process.

"Any President lives longer in history than in headlines," Kissinger declared in defending U.S. foreign policy — and disassociating it from Nixon's Watergate troubles.

He said that in negotiating nuclear weapons with Moscow and in all other foreign fields he would be guided by "our national interest" and not by any attempt to make the administration look good as the impeachment showdown draws near.

Looking ahead to his Middle East trip starting this weekend, Kissinger would not forecast a disengagement between Israeli and Syrian forces in the Golan Heights but said he expected to make progress. He hinted that he would agree to an early shifting of the diplomatic center to Geneva, as Moscow has demanded.

At the same time, Kissinger said he would try to narrow differences on nuclear weapons positions when he sees Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Geneva on Monday.

And, in his longest and most vigorous response, Kissinger sharply disputed a contention by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., that the United States is seeking a "quick fix" on a new nuclear agreement with the Soviet Union to ease impeachment pressure on the President.

Kissinger said he has "great respect" for Jackson but cautioned that public debate of this aspect of foreign policy "should not be conducted on the basis of slogans."

Kissinger also denied that the 1972 pioneering nuclear treaty with Russia had caused strategic disadvantages for the United States, particularly in light of the Soviet's advantage in number of launchers. This country has an enormous edge in warheads, said Kissinger, adding: "One is hit by warheads, not launchers."

On other topics, Kissinger said:

—Egypt has not "formally raised" a request for American weapons with arms manufacturers here and he does not expect any request to be made in the near future. His remarks left open the possibility of eventual U.S. arms sales to Cairo.

Coup leader plans Portuguese reforms

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Junta leader Antonio de Spínola announced today sweeping reforms in the one-day-old coup in Portugal, including breaking up the political police and holding free elections within a year.

The 64-year-old general, who swept to power in a military revolt that overthrew the 42-year-old dictatorship, also announced he was firing all civil governors both in Portugal and its overseas provinces, and all members of the cabinet.

Spínola said former Premier Marcello Caetano and President Americo Thomaz had been sent to the island of Madeira. He did not say if they would face prosecution.

Speaking to newsmen, Spínola said he was dissolving the one-house National Assembly, and he told questioners he would permit a multiparty political cabinet. But he did not say if Communists or Socialists would be included.

Spínola said at the moment he does not intend to negotiate with any of the liberation movements in Portugal's black African territories of Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

Hundreds of people gathered at Caxias Prison outside Lisbon as word went out that an estimated 180 political prisoners were to be freed.

In downtown Lisbon an angry crowd jeered and shouted, "Thieves" and "Robbers" as uniformed political police were led to vans by the army.

The crowd threw cigarettes and yelled encouragement to the troops.

A few tanks still moved through Lisbon's streets but the city was quiet. Stores reopened, but the nation's airport remained closed and so was the border between Spain and Portugal.

Lisbon newspapers listed three persons killed and 45 injured during the coup.

But generally Thursday was a day of celebration, with thousands of young men streaming into the streets to cheer the rebel troops, plying them with wine and cigarettes and smashing windows to defy police.

Spínola, who was retired by Caetano last month because he advocated an end to the 13-year-old colonial war in Portugal's African territories, emerged as the leader of the seven-man National Salvation Junta.

Senate approves legislation on anti-trespassing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate approved today and returned to the House a proposed anti-trespassing law.

The bill, approved 19-12, contains an amendment saying property owners can't be held accountable for their actions in preventing trespassing on their property.

Sen. Edward Linehan, D-St. Louis, saying he would "trespass" on the bill and try to kill it, said the clause could be interpreted to mean that a property owner could shoot a trespasser.

If the House accepts the amendment, the bill goes to the governor.

The bill applies to boats, planes, cars and buildings that are posted with no-trespassing signs and any property with a fence around it.

In a Thursday night session, the Senate approved a bill saying stores cannot deny credit to women.

The House had approved the bill but it was sent to a conference committee to correct technical flaws. The Senate accepted the conference report and the House was expected to follow suit.

The measure, "piggybacked" onto a Senate bill making changes in definitions in the retail sales credit law, was similar to one far down on the Senate calendar.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Sue Shear, D-Clayton, and Sen. Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau.

It forbids denial of credit based on sex or marital status.

Debated but left without action was a bill eliminating the $500 exemption on used car trade-ins for collection of sales taxes.

Several senators objected because it would cost the state money and no estimate was provided.

The measure, put on the informal calendar for further study, would have this effect:

At present, if a person gets $400 on his car in buying one valued at $3,000, he pays sales taxes on the full $3,000 price. If he received $500 for his car, he would pay taxes only on the difference of $2,500. The same is true for trade-ins valued at more than $500.

Under the proposed change, he still would pay taxes on the difference regardless of how much his trade-in is worth. If he bought a car worth $3,000 and got $400 on his trade-in, he would pay taxes only $2,600.

Earlier, the dispute between State Mental Health Director Harold Robb and the Missouri Senate was lessened as the chairman of the Mental Health Committee agreed to seek an emergency appropriation to partially compensate Robb for money losses he says will force him to dismiss employees.

Sen. John D. Schneider, D-St. Louis, said the appropriation would be sought to provide almost $1.1 million in additional funds for the state Division of Mental Health.

A loss of $742,000 because of passage by the legislature during the last session of a bill to eliminate urban-rural pay differentials will account for the major portion of the emergency appropriations.

Also to be sought is $324,000 to make up for funding of parttime employees during the last fiscal year. Those employees should be considered full-time, Robb says.

Schneider says the remaining differences between the Senate and Robb are in federal funds to be cut-off during the next fiscal year and he feels federally financed programs involved should be examined before committing any state money to continue them.

The Senate voted to send a bill back to the House for the second time because it added pay raises for county recorders, county judges and state Tax Commission members to a Senate bills that originally provided for raises to county recorders based on assessed valuation.

Earlier, the Senate had sent the bill back to the House and the House had deleted its amendment making the salaries of county collectors based on a set scale rather than on the amount of taxes collected.

The House began debate on a measure to revise the workman's compensation law in Missouri that would substantially increase benefits. No action was taken, although a number of amendments were approved.

The bill under consideration is a substitute bill for one previously approved in the Senate.

Other amendments would exempt farm and domestic worker employers with payrolls of less than $2,500 a year and eliminate a committee of the legislature provided in the House bill to study workman's compensation and make recommendations for its improvement.

Other House-approved bills returned to the Senate for acceptance of House amendments would:

—Increase benefits to survivors under the judicial retirement system.

—Add one judge to the Kansas City Court of Appeals and one to the Springfield Court of Appeals.

Approved by the House and sent to the governor was a bill to add two judges to the St. Louis Court of Appeals.

Maestro Morigi: master tradesman of a dying art

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — When he was a young man in Italy, learning his trade, stone carver Roger Morigi energetically, but foolishly, chipped a lily from an unfinished sculpture. Whereupon his teacher — "a giant of a man with a temper to match" — pointed out the error by razing and then cuffing the covering apprentice behind the neck.

"That's the way we learned," Morigi says today. And learn he did. There are perhaps a dozen sophisticated stone carvers in America today, half of whom have been recognized as

"masters" of the craft, and one of whom — Roger Morigi — is generally considered the maestro's maestro. It's been five decades since he's knocked a lily off a piece; even his mistakes now are wondrous art.

Morigi, in his 60s, is the chief carver for Washington's National Cathedral. He leads a group of seven carvers there, plus two lesser workmen who are not as advanced, and church officials say the Morigi-Cathedral tieup is fitting. The church, a 65-year-old, $20 million gothic construction which is not yet finished, is perhaps the finest structure of its kind in the Americas. Morigi, equally dated and proud, is one of the few men in the world skilled enough to meet cathedral building standards.

Actually, skill is an inadequate description of Morigi's genius. Working with techniques that date to Michelangelo, with tools that have not changed since Nefertiti, Morigi's work is priceless.

It is so, explains an associate, "because he is one of the last of his kind." Once the world was crammed with stone carvers, in the days when structures were careful creations of stone on stone, now there is glass siding, aluminum trim and hermetically sealed sterilization, and Roger Morigi is an endangered species. "When he goes," the associate says, "who will we have?"

There will be a few stone carvers left when Morigi stops, no doubt there will always be a few around. But Morigi is one of the last who link today with yesterday. No longer is stone carving passed from master to apprentice — "kids today don't want to pay the price," says Morigi.

Thus with unionization and commercialization, not to mention laws which prohibit the cuffing of students, future carvers will learn from books and profit not from experience; and the loss will be irreversible.

So it is that authorities at the National Cathedral (officially the Cathedral Church of St. Peter and St. Paul) look after Morigi and his fellow carvers as any other finite treasure.

Completion of the 301-foot high church is at long last expected in the early 1980s, and such are the construction standards — many artistic touches have been done and redone repeatedly to pass muster — that only masters such as Morigi can assure completion. Morigi is not paid royally — $10 an hour — but his advice and idiosyncrasies are courted and favored.

"When the big fellows approach Roger," says a friend, "they do so with reverence for a true artist."

Truth to tell, Morigi is not an artist in the sense of being imaginative or experimental. He is a tradesman. The romantic artist works until he falls to the floor from fatigue; the unromantic Morigi remembers that even during the Depression, while working on a Philadelphia bank building, "I never tried for a dime of overtime. Came 4:30 and Roger went home to his family."

sculptors, he is, at least in execution, artistically facile. Chipping away in his small and dusty shed, his hands flying and his feet moving animatedly around his piece, he makes it look easy. Easy? He once spent more than four years carving 44 angels for the Cathedral entrance — "one of the most perfect doorways in the world" — and he spent a tedious month apiece on 14 small Stations of the Cross plaques that decorate a New York State Jesuit grounds.

Also, Morigi has the artist's sense of detail ("I never touch my stone with my hands; it leaves oil"), the artist's persistence ("I say to the stone: 'Stone, you ain't gonna whip me. I'm gonna whip you'"), and the artist's complex set of personal judgments ("I have no favorite work; to me nothing is ever really good enough").

Whatever he's called, though, artist or artisan, Morigi is a dinosaur on the earth. A short, stocky, bald, ebullient man, he is trapped in the bog of modernism, from which there is no escape. Not many contractors call for gargoyles carving anymore; the gargoyles and Roger Morigi are of another age.

Concordia students may be placed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Suspended Concordia President John Tietjen predicted graduating Concordia Seminary students seniors will be placed in the ministry of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Tietjen said in an Omaha interview Wednesday he thinks this decision will be made by the synod's Council of Presidents at a two-day meeting starting Monday in St. Louis.

The council consists of 40 district presidents, president of the synod and its five vice presidents.

"I think a majority of them (district presidents) will come here and make good on that pledge," he said.

The 45-year-old Tietjen was referring to the council's earlier pledge to find a way of placing the seniors, who walked out of Concordia Seminary along with most other students and faculty in protest over the suspension of Dr. Tietjen for alleged false doctrine and malfeasance in office.

The protesters formed "Seminex," a seminary-in-exile, where the students are completing classes for the school year.

Dr. Tietjen said, "We hope the Council of Presidents will place the students. If they don't, we are prepared to find our own ways of getting them placed."

The root of the theological controversy centers around whether the first three chapters of Genesis in the Old Testament should be considered as literal history or symbolic work used to tell God's truth.

Business news

TULSA, Okla. — LVO Cable, Inc., cable television and microwave multiple systems operator, has reported consolidated revenues for nine months ended Feb. 28 of $6,754,000, an 18 per cent increase from $5,722,000 for the comparable period one year ago.

Gene W. Schneider, president, said net earnings after taxes for the period were $16,000, or 1 cent per share, compared with $353,000, or 23 cents per share for the previous year's comparable period. There were 1,879,226 average shares outstanding for the current period, compared with 1,561,187 shares for the previous period.

Schneider said the decrease in earnings for the nine months was due to expected operating losses of new cable systems, and increased interest costs.

Youths arrested for 'harassing' shoppers

By F. T. MACFEELY
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Smiling and carrying their Bibles, 107 youthful evangelists have trooped off to jail, refusing to accept freedom if it means giving up their preaching even for a few days.

County Judge Raymond L. Simpson offered the defendants, all charged with loitering, released on their own recognizance Wednesday if they would promise to quit bothering people in area shopping centers.

Their attorney, Louis Hardin Jr., contended that such conditions would violate the constitutional rights of the defendants.

"All right, I will strike the conditions and deny any release on recognizance," the judge replied. He set $26 bond for each defendant and set arraignment for Monday.

Smiling as they went, the 35 young women and 72 young men marched to separate jails. Another 30 persons paid the bond and were freed.

"We don't try to get arrested," said Jerry Romprey, 32, a leader who was not jailed. He said the group, known as "Christ is the Answer," was founded two years ago in Milwaukee and has grown from 60 members to 240. All travel in a 44-vehicle caravan, usually staying in a city for about eight weeks.

He said the group frequents shopping centers because that's where they find people.

"The Lord told us to go into the world and preach the gospel wherever people are," he explained.

Police said the group arrived from Fort Lauderdale this week and, after getting permission to conduct missionary work in a shopping center, began grabbing people to get them to listen. Customers complained and merchants called police. The arrests were made Tuesday.

"We don't harass anybody," Romprey said. "The merchants are just very uptight about us talking about Jesus."

Hatfield resolution urges day of humility, prayer

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

At the initiation of Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, a theologically sharp Oregonian who is regarded a possible choice for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination, many Americans have set aside a day to "confess our national sins and to pray for clemency and forgiveness."

They've scheduled observances on Tuesday, April 30, of a National Day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer, as urged in a resolution introduced by Hatfield and adopted by the U.S. Senate.

Participation has been supported by the U.S. Catholic bishops administrative board, by several Protestant and ecumenical organizations and by many community groups. At least seven governors—in Colorado, Arizona, Idaho, Louisiana, Georgia, Nebraska and Alabama—have issued proclamations for the observance.

It could "result in a great spiritual awakening throughout our land," says Bill Bright, president of Campus Crusade for Christ, in material sent to 600,000 campus workers. "Prayers ... can turn the tide and change our nation."

Hatfield, 51, a biblically minded student of Abraham Lincoln and a critic of so-called "civil religion" that equates

Americanism with God, says "we must turn in repentance from the sin that has scarred our national soul."

"Only a national confession of corporate guilt can save us from the worship of our own finite power ... (and) heal the wounds that presently afflict us."

A Baptist and two-time governor of his home state before being elected to the U.S. Senate in 1966, Hatfield is among federal lawmakers (along with Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa) disposed to discuss issues in such explicitly religious terms.

"Until you know a candidate's philosophy of life, you don't know the candidate," he told a recent interviewer. Asked his philosophy, he said, "I define my philosophy in terms of the Lordship on Jesus Christ."

Several influential church journals have cited Hatfield as a possibility for the 1976 presidential race. He "might emerge as the Republican party's Mr. Clean, capable of the Augean-stables trick of digging out after Watergate," writes editor James Wall, editor of the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century.

"If he does, and if he continues his candor and conviction straight into the White House, the country might have found the man who can be moral without being moralistic, devout without being pietistic."

In a case reported in 1888, a 15-year-old female patient yawned continuously for a period of five weeks.

Exxon profit report not whole story

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the nation's biggest oil company, reduced its first quarter profits by approximately $400 million to take into account future taxes and political opposition, securities analysts say.

The additional money, if added to the company's announced earnings, would have brought Exxon's earnings for the three month period to over a billion dollars. It would have increased their percentage gain from the year-earlier period to 118 per cent, and not the 39 per cent reported by the firm.

Asked about the amount, an Exxon spokesman would not deny it and said the company had decided not to disclose the actual charge. He said the action was in line with accepted accounting principles.

Some securities analysts and accountants, however, feel the Deduction was also taken to defuse an expected public reaction to the high profits.

"Ordinarily a company doesn't reduce its earnings by a liability which hasn't yet occurred," says Peter Knutson, an associate professor of accounting at the Wharton School of Finance in Philadelphia.

Companies usually take note of the possible expense but don't subtract the estimated liability from profits, Knutson says.

Exxon claims its deductions on the basis of two factors. The first is an estimated increase in the price of certain Mideast crude oil which is being bought back from the producing nations. This cost is still under negotiation.

The company also says it deducted from its earnings the amount it may have to pay in taxes if the U.S. Congress removes a foreign tax credit Exxon now receives. A bill with such a provision is now in the House Ways and Means Committee and would be retroactive to Jan. 1, Exxon says.

Working independently, two Wall Street securities analysts who follow the oil industry place Exxon's undeclared "contingent liabilities" at around $400 million for the first quarter.

Robert Albrecht, an oil analyst with Reynolds Inc., a New York brokerage house, calculates that Exxon's provision for added Mideast crude costs could run "as high as $368 million." A rough guess would place their additional tax burden at $92 million for the quarter if the bill in Congress is passed, he says.

Robert Hinckley, oil analyst with W.E. Hutton & Co., also thinks Exxon's special charge could run around $400 million. He based his estimate on the company's declared inventory profit of $80 million.

Inventory profits are the result of an increase in the value of goods kept in storage or in process in a time of rising prices. At any one time, Exxon has a minimum of 30 million barrels of oil stored around the world, and another 60 million barrels in tankers on the high seas.

Committee approves Simon's nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee unanimously approved today the nomination of William E. Simon to succeed George Shultz as secretary of the treasury.

The Senate is expected to confirm the nomination early next week.

Three thefts from autos Thursday night are reported

Three thefts involving merchandise taken from autos were reported to police Thursday. Two of the thefts occurred on the Rival Mfg. Co. parking lot.

Ken Jiles, Marshall, told police that someone broke into his pickup truck while it was parked on the Rival lot and made off with a citizen's band radio, a 22 caliber rifle and some 22 caliber ammunition.

The thieves pried open a vent window of the 1963 Ford truck to gain access. Value of the items taken was not available.

An eight-track stereo unit, two stereo speakers and a hunting knife, worth $60 together, were reported stolen from a car belonging to Paul Vansteenburgh, Houstonia, while it was parked on the Rival lot Thursday night. Access was gained by forcing the wing vent of the left front door.

A tape player valued at $40 was taken from a car owned by Glenn Shoemaker, 1610 South Prospect, shortly after midnight Thursday while the vehicle was parked on the Jensen Co. lot, 519 East Third.

The car was left on the lot by Shoemaker's wife and, when she returned later, she found the items missing. The car was not locked at the time of theft.

Turkish uphold drug sentences for Americans

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A five-judge criminal appeals court today upheld a lower court decision sentencing three Americans to life terms on conviction of conspiring to smuggle drugs into Turkey.

The hushed session lasted five minutes. The verdict of the Turkish court virtually exhausted all legal means for a reversal of the sentence of Katherine Zenz, 28, of Lancaster, Wis.; Joann McDaniel, 29, of Coos Bay, Ore.; and Robert E. Hubbard, 23, of San Diego, Calif.

The decision of the appeals court makes the sentence final except for a slim chance that a request for retrial by the defense may be granted, legal authorities said.

The retrial is only granted in cases where important new evidence or witnesses can be presented, they said.

The three will probably benefit from an amnesty bill presently under debate in the Turkish parliament which would reduce all life terms to 24 years imprisonment when enacted.

The three Americans were arrested Dec. 10, 1972, while crossing into Turkey from Syria. A police search at the border post revealed 236 pounds of hashish hidden in the three minibuses they were driving.

The Americans were first tried in Antakya, in southeast Turkey near the Syrian border. They said they rented the minibuses in Munich, where they met by chance in a discotheque.

They drove to Beirut, crossing Turkey, to buy curios and leather goods, according to their testimony.

The two women said they were told by Hubbard they would drive back to Istanbul for a better bargain on these goods and started the trip back to Europe, after having picked up four other American tourists, all girls, in Beirut.

The two women have consistently denied any knowledge of the vehicles' cargo. Hubbard confessed that he was the only one responsible for the smuggling operation and that the two women were in the clear.

Death of Sedalia man is said due to natural causes

Following an autopsy late Thursday, Dr. Larry Henry, a pathologist, said that Donald Napier, 42, died of natural causes.

Napier's body was found in his apartment at 116½ East Main around 10:30 a.m. Thursday by Fred Evans, 1917 West Third.

Dr. Henry said Friday morning that Napier had died of a stroke. He said the man had probably been dead "a couple of days."

Dr. J. E. Block, Napier's physician, had requested the autopsy because the length of time that had passed between the death and the time the body was discovered made it impossible to determine the cause of death without an autopsy.

He was born Aug. 9, 1931, at Sedalia, son of the late Ray S. and Mary Sizelove Napier.

He was a veteran of World War II.

He is survived by one brother, Delmar Napier, 211 East Saline; and one sister, Mrs. Harvey (Marion) Fykes, Stockton, Calif.

Graveside services and burial will be held at the Crown Hill Cemetery at 11 a.m. Saturday. The Rev. Orval Woolery will officiate.

The body is at the Ewing Funeral Home.

Music Man." Mary Jo Holden, now a senior, again succeeds in her dual role as dancer and choreographer. Her direction of and participation in the Fan Tan Fanny dancers sketch is a gem of eye-filling entertainment.

Dramatically speaking, the key roles of Madam Liang and her brother-in-law, Wang Chi Yang, are superbly recreated by Laura Martin and Bill Grother.

Miss Martin is particularly pleasing in her several vocal solos, including "You Are Beautiful" and "Chop Suey." Grother excels in conveying the comedic despair and frustration of a man who perceives his son as forsaking the formalities of Chinese custom in brazen San Francisco.

As Wang Yang's oldest son, Wang Ta, who is initially caught between his allegiance to old-world custom and his fondness for new-world women, Dan Gray's extensive experience asserted itself solidly. Gray has appeared in eight past S-C productions, with "Flower Drum Song" providing a fitting climax to his high school career.

New record prime lending rate posted

NEW YORK (AP) — More banks have raised their prime lending rates to 10½ per cent and a record 10¾ per cent prime rate has been posted by the Citizens & Southern National Bank of Atlanta.

Only last week, Citizens & Southern was the first bank to move from a 10¼ per cent prime to the then-record 10½ per cent level.

At the start of business Thursday Manufacturers Hanover Trust and Morgan Guaranty Trust, both of New York, joined several smaller banks in raising the prime to the 10½ per cent mark. Manufacturers Hanover is the nation's fourth largest commercial bank and Morgan Guaranty is the fifth biggest.

At the 10½ per cent rate were more than 20 banks, including four of the nation's five largest. First National City Bank of New York, which announces its prime today, was the only one of the top five that had not moved.

The prime rate is the interest a bank charges on a loan to its biggest and most credit-worthy corporate customers. While not directly tied to consumer and small business loans, it serves as an indicator that money is tight and all interest rates may rise.

Eagleton

necessary for the success of our democratic system," he added.

The junior senator said he would debate Curtis, a former congressman from St. Louis County, in a series of statewide broadcast debates instead of the usual practice of spending large sums of money for paid radio and television advertisements.

"Amen. I welcome it. That's great," said Curtis when informed by the Associated Press of Eagleton's proposal.

"Let's get together on the guidelines so we can sharpen the issues," Curtis said.

He added that he tried to debate Eagleton during Curtis's unsuccessful Senate bid in 1968. Curtis, a former congressman from St. Louis County, said the debates would "sharpen the issues for the voters."

Eagleton said he debated Curtis. "I think it was six times" during his '68 senatorial campaign.

"We even went so far as to debate in the state of Kansas," he said.

Eagleton announced his candidacy at a news conference here and scheduled similar sessions for later today in Kansas City and Jefferson City, where he would also file for the nomination.

Two other Democrats have already announced their intentions to seek the job. They are Lee C. Sutton of Columbia and Pat O'Brien of Bloomfield. Also filing for the G.O. nomination was Gregory Hansman of University City.

Eagleton gained national recognition in 1972 when Democratic Presidential nominee George McGovern chose him as his running mate, then asked him to step down two weeks later when Eagleton acknowledged he had undergone treatment in the early 1960s for depression.

The incident stemmed from a report by columnist Jack Anderson shortly after Eagleton was added to the ticket that he had been charged several times with drunken driving and other traffic offenses. Eagleton termed the story a "damnable lie" and said he had never been stopped for drunken driving.

But the report caused further probes into the senator's background and Eagleton decided to make public his hospital records.

Six days after that, Eagleton and McGovern agreed that the best course was for Eagleton to "step aside." The announcement came four days after McGovern said he was behind Eagleton "1,000 per cent."

Eagleton admitted the decision was not an easy one for him to make, but said he believed his candidacy had caused great divisions within the Democratic party. Eagleton was later succeeded on the ticket by Sargent Shriver.

Immediately after making the announcement, Eagleton announced his intentions to seek re-election to the Senate.

Eagleton, a former St. Louis Circuit Attorney and Missouri lieutenant governor, has had a hand in several clean air and anti-pollution acts and was an early advocate of wage and price controls to curb inflation. He has also been connected with several anti-drug and federal housing proposals and was an early opponent to bombing in VietNam.

Ann Landers

Children seek help for alcoholic parents

Dear Ann Landers: Last night my husband and I were jarred out of a sound sleep by a ringing telephone at 2:00 a.m. It was his mother, drunk, as usual. She mumbled, "Your father got mad at me while we were having a few drinks at Harry's bar and he left me here. The S.O.B. took the car and I'm stuck with the bar bill and no way to get home. Come and get me."

Of course, my husband got out of bed, dressed and went over to Harry's and bailed out his drunken mother. This is the third time in three months she has pulled something like this.

We have sent them literature from the National Council on Alcoholism. We've begged them to go to AA. We've had our family doctor talk to them. Two years ago we sacrificed our vacation and sent them to a dry-out spa. Nothing works. They refuse to stick with any kind of counseling. "It's too much trouble."

If you can think of a way to get through to these two boozers, we'd be very grateful. Everything we've tried has added up to zero. We'll do anything you say. — Exhausted Children

Dear Ex: If I knew of a magic formula to cure alcoholism, I'd be the most valuable person in the world.

There are nine million alcoholics in the United States and several million more who masquerade under the fancy title of "social drinkers." Psychiatrists are not enthusiastic about taking on alcoholic patients because they are extremely difficult to treat. Religion has not had much success with them either. Hospitalization is very costly and usually the boozier is back on the sauce after he returns to the real world and must cope with the problems that bug him.

Alcoholics Anonymous still has the best record for arresting alcoholism. But the alcoholic must WANT to join. If he is dragged there it will do no good. Nobody listens until he is ready. So just hang in there and hope your parents will become so sick of themselves they'll seek the help they so desperately need.

Dear Ann Landers: Speaking of smelling like a goat (as your column did recently), can you please tell us what to do about a person in our office who smells worse?

This enormous hulk doesn't take one bath a month. Every area she lumbers into reeks for half an hour after she leaves.

The woman has the disposition of a wounded elk and no friends. I feel sorry for her and would like to be pleasant, but I gag when I get within three feet of her. If we happen to get into the same elevator it ruins my day.

I've heard several sickening jokes about this person, but actually, it's not funny. It's tragic. Please suggest something. — N.N.

Dear N.: This is not an uncommon problem; from your description, however, it's more severe than most of the complaints I get along these lines.

The woman is more than just "lazy." She's got a geranium in her cranium. People who have this problem often do not realize that they are asphyxiating their fellow men. The best approach is to gather your courage and speak to her in a compassionate and gentle manner. Explain that you are her friend and want to help. If this doesn't do it, she needs a psychiatrist and should be told.

Energy saving starts with tot

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — In these days of energy saving I have found a way to use the scalding water left after I sterilize my baby's bottle nipples. I wash dishes and set them to drain while waiting for the nipples to boil. After capping baby's bottles I pour the boiling water over the dishes for an extra germ proofing. — MRS. H. W.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is aimed at shoe manufacturers who design and make shoes with laces that are perhaps extra wide, an unusual length, color, etc. Such shoes have been designed for these particular laces and simply have no style when other laces are used and still we cannot buy replacements even at the store where the shoes were bought. I am sure they expect their shoes to last longer than a pair of laces so do not furnish an extra pair of laces. I am sure most customers would be delighted to pay the small extra cost at the time of purchase of the shoes. In fact knowing they could be bought might help in the sale of the shoes. — SHIRLEY.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. C.B.S. wanted to know how to remove cement spots from the tile on her bathroom floor. My daughter used soapy steel wool pads on such spots on her bathroom floor after some was spilled when putting tile on the walls. Hope this does the work for Mrs. C.B.S. — GLADYS.

DEAR POLLY — To remove the cement spots from her tile floors Mrs. C.B.S. could vigorously scrub with a sponge or scratch pad that had been dipped in a mixture of one part muriatic acid (POISON) and five parts water. Rinse immediately with clean water and be sure to wear rubber gloves. — CARL.

DEAR POLLY — A simple way to apply alcohol without making a big mess and not even having to use cotton is to put it in an empty snap-off, roll-on top deodorant bottle. First, clean the bottle very thoroughly, fill and snap on the roll-on top. Just uncup the bottle when needed and roll on the alcohol. — PAM.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Wine irritates ulcer victim

Dear Dr. Lamb — How does one soothe an irritated duodenal ulcer before and after having a couple of glasses of wine? A typical answer would be not to drink, correct?

I am not an alcoholic, but whenever my stomach is upset and when I have a before and after dinner wine, then my duodenum starts acting up. Then it quiets down and doesn't bother me for awhile.

I'm 61, retired, troubled with the ulcer for the past 10 years off and on. Five years ago I had a heart attack. I don't smoke, blood pressure is O.K., my weight is normal and supposedly I'm in good health.

Of course, I don't drink whiskey, but my doctor allows me to have dinner wines such as sauterne, and port or sherry as an after-dinner drink. If this vice, which is the only one I have left, is injurious to my health, then I suppose I'll have to give it up. But, I would appreciate your answer.

Dear Reader — You are right. The correct answer is not to drink at all. Alcohol is very hard on the digestive tract and will, as you have found out, bring on ulcer pains. It will stimulate the formation of excess acid pepsin juice, and I think you should quit. There is just as much alcohol in a glass of wine as a can of beer or a cocktail with a jigger of whiskey, rum or gin.

If for any reason you absolutely must take a nip or already have, then I think you should immediately take one of the antacid preparations and continue to take them for the next several hours. This might help minimize the bad effects of the acid pepsin juice in this situation. I'm not recommending this as the proper course, since I think alcohol does other things to the stomach that you should avoid, like dissolving the protective coating of mucus over the stomach lining that protects the stomach cells from digestive action.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am writing you to clear up an argument my husband and I are having. I read in an article where sex would either make you lose weight or gain weight, and my husband says this is the dumbest thing he's ever heard, so I decided to ask you. Is it true that sex causes weight gain or loss? If so, what causes this?

Dear Reader — One enthusiast did report in a popular women's magazine that a good way to lose weight was to make love. He suggested it instead of eating a nighttime snack. The phrase he used was "reach for your mate instead of a plate."

Well, anything that results in eating fewer calories helps keep the weight down. And, sex is also exercise, but I'm afraid the amount of calories the enthusiast credited it with burning was a bit exaggerated — like many things often are in regards to sex. So, the decrease in calories and the exercise both tend to cause you to lose weight — but don't expect miracles unless it results in your eating a lot less calories.

The only way you gain weight from sex is in the event that it results in pregnancy — and I guess I don't need to explain that.

Americans are returning to former energy habits

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Americans are abandoning the strict conservation measures they imposed on themselves at the height of the energy crisis.

A nationwide Associated Press survey finds that automobile traffic in most areas of the country is approaching pre-emergency levels. It also shows that toll road receipts are climbing, mass transit use is slipping and the rate of electricity conservation is falling.

"There are as many people on the road now as there were in September," before the Arab oil embargo brought the winter energy crisis, said federal energy chief John C. Sawhill. The AP survey showed that in recent weeks police in many states have written many more speeding tickets as motorists press down on the gas pedal.

It was the embargo imposed by Middle East producers in the fall that forced Americans to significantly cut back their use of energy, and it was the end of that embargo on March 18 that apparently has started them back toward their old habits.

A spokesman for Florida Power & Light Co., the state's largest utility, said its customers used six per cent less electricity than they normally would have between early December and late February.

But that figure fell to three per cent in March and a spokesman said "figures the week the Arab oil embargo was lifted indicate customers used noticeably more electricity than any other week in March." A similar pattern was repeated in many states, with utilities and state agencies reporting that conservation is slipping. They noted, however, that Americans still are not using the amount of electricity they would under normal growth patterns.

The push by city, state and federal governments for citizens to use car pools appears from the AP survey to have been a miserable failure in most areas. A group of scientists at the Opinion Research Center in Chicago, who have conducted weekly energy surveys for a year, said they found no tendency by consumers to switch away from the single-passenger auto trip.

The sharply higher prices for gasoline brought about by a quadrupling in the foreign price of oil does not seem to be keeping people off the roads. But the price hikes, coupled with lower speed limits, may be responsible for the continued strong business being done by Amtrak and the airlines.

The American Automobile Association said Tuesday that the gasoline situation in the country is generally stabilized. It said a spot check of 6,152 stations found only 2 per cent out of gas, only 2.5 per cent operating on split shifts and only 6 per cent limiting purchases.

And everywhere, from the major cities to rural areas, the gasoline lines which aggravated motorists and shocked politicians in January and February are gone.

Senate passes bill on death penalty

The Missouri Senate has approved a bill that would restore the death penalty in the state for certain classifications of murder.

Passed by a vote of 25-7 Wednesday was a bill specifying capital punishment for those convicted of the following crimes:

Slaying during a rape or kidnaping; killing for payment or hiring someone to do so; murders committed while serving a felony sentence in a penal institution; and killing a peace officer in an attempt to prevent the officer from performing his official duties.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Ike Skelton, D-Lexington, is not an ideal one. No doubt one could quarrel with some of the finer distinctions that make certain murders capital offenses and others not. The Senate's bill will now have to be reconciled in conference committee with a broader House version that lists 11 categories of murders as justification for capital punishment.

But in principle, the bill is needed. If we are to deter the more heinous crimes, which have become all too common today, then the certainty of capital punishment must be restored to the criminal justice system.

Presently the only punitive recourse for even the most vicious of crimes is a prison sentence, and liberal parole procedures have made even this something of a joke. Even so-called "lifers" can expect to be back out on the street after serving only a relatively few years in some cases.

We expect that most Missourians view the restoration of the death penalty as a necessary step to serve notice on potential killers that they can expect to pay the ultimate penalty for their crimes.

WASHINGTON — The secretive National Security Agency, which specializes in gathering foreign intelligence, once tried to get the late J. Edgar Hoover to break into foreign embassies to steal their spy codes.

This was too much for the intrepid old FBI director who vetoed the project, according to a top-secret summary, "because of risk."

The summary digests the testimony last year of Tom Charles Huston, a young White House aide, behind guarded doors of the Senate Armed Services Committee. The senators questioned Huston about his notorious plan, endorsed by President Nixon, to root out radicals through housebreakings, wiretaps and intimidation.

Some of Hoover's top aides, testified Huston, had wanted him to use teen-age informers on college campuses. At first, Huston refused to employ anyone under 21. But "after the voting age was lowered to 18 by Congress," said Huston, "Hoover permitted FBI campus informers to be lowered to 18."

Hoover apparently felt anyone old enough to vote was old enough to spy.

Some of Hoover's aides were privately skeptical of the old crime fighter's grasp of revolutionary activities, Huston told the committee. He said the dissident FBI aides "believed Hoover didn't understand the difference between the Communists of the '30s and '40s and the present-day revolutionaries."

Huston testified that, before Hoover scotched the secret scheme, federal intelligence agencies plotted the housebreakings and other criminal acts without concern for "the exact lines to be drawn" or for "their legality."

"There was never a discussion," he added, "as to limiting the activities to foreign inspired activities." In other words, relates the top-secret summary, Huston "assumed the group would deal with both foreign-inspired and purely domestic threats to national security."

A mysterious "NSID-6" plan, mentioned in the summary, would have allowed federal agents to listen in on "communication of U. S. citizens using international facilities." This presumably means wiretaps would have been permitted on overseas phone calls.

There was talk, too, of mail covers to develop foreign intelligence in the United States. But Huston insisted this might "entail the identification of contacts of Soviet bloc intelligence sources." In other words, the mail cover might interfere with U. S. informants.

The idea of breaking into foreign embassies to steal their codes was proposed by the former National Security Agency boss, Adm. Noel Gaylor, who is now U. S. military commander in the Pacific.

"Huston said that NSA (Gaylor) wanted the FBI to conduct surreptitious entry for foreign cryptographic material," states the summary. "Hoover didn't because of risk."

FOOTNOTE: At the NSA, a spokesman declined comment. Huston, now practicing law in Indianapolis, also would not comment for the record.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Intelligence reports warn that Arab terrorists are plotting to kill or kidnap Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Kissinger and his new wife are guarded wherever they go by the Secret Service. Ex-Attorney General John Mitchell's tax returns show he is living on income from his former law firm, which removed his name from the door but is continuing to pay him. Mitchell, in turn, is paying the bills of his separated wife, Martha, including her telephone bills which run several hundred dollars a month. Watergate Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., now on the receiving end of an investigation, will face a federal grand jury in Jacksonville, Fla., on May 13. The prosecutors will ask him to account for funds that were collected by his political organization. Unless he comes up with the right answers, the prosecutors are considering charging him with graft.

Of all the indicted Watergate defendants, the special prosecutors admit privately that their weakest case is against former White House aide Charles Colson. They debated up to the last minute whether to include him in the indictments. The Marriott hotel-restaurant chain, whose founder J. Willard Marriott ran both the 1968 and 1972 inaugurations for President Nixon, has removed some of the Nixon portraits from its hotels. The expensive pictures had been defaced with graffiti.

The House folding room, which is located in a poorly lit and ventilated basement called "The Hole" by workers, operates in gross violation of the Occupational Safety and Health Act which the Congress passed and expects commercial firms to obey. John Volpe, the U. S. ambassador to Rome, has written to President Nixon congratulating him on his choice of James St. Clair to defend him against impeachment charges. When Volpe was governor of Massachusetts, he said, St. Clair did a "brilliant" job directing a state investigation of police corruption.

Impeachment moves drag out

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — Knowledgeable sources in Congress now see the House Judiciary Committee proceedings on possible impeachment of President Nixon ending no earlier than June 20. If impeachment articles were voted out, it is foreseen that nothing more would happen until after a July 4 recess period.

Under the suggested timetable, it would thus be well into July before the full House could begin turning its full attention to impeachment, with all other matters rigidly excluded. This presumes first clearing away at least some of the basic appropriations for the fiscal 1975 budget, and any other urgent issues.

One source says that under the indicated tightly controlled debate conditions, the House might conclude its deliberations in two weeks, or near July's end. This could be optimistic, should a very large number of lawmakers wish to be heard. There is easy gauge on that one.

But let's plunge on with the theoretical timetable envisioned by key sources. The view is that the next step would be to grant the President a substantial span of time, no less than a month, to prepare his defense for the Senate — again presuming the House has voted against him on one or more of the proposed impeachment articles.

In almost any court of law, a defendant could surely win such preparatory time. Thoughtful House members think the President is entitled to it, to assure both the fact and the appearance of utter fairness in such critical proceedings.

It is for that same reason they also approve letting Mr. Nixon have his own counsel at the House Judiciary stage of the case.

In the committee phase, with the President's lawyer participating, any and all Republican committee members are as free as they care to be from acting as presidential advocates. To feel compelled to do so would have been awkward, since they inevitably must vote at some point on whether the evidence warrants impeachment.

The congressional quest for fairness, and its appearance, thus could take the lawmakers past Labor Day before any crucial weighing of the impeachment case would begin in the Senate — sitting, of course, as the jury determining whether or not to remove Mr. Nixon from office.

Oh my aching back!

By DOUG KNEIBERT

It is painful task, writing this column.

And I don't use the term as a figure of speech.

I mean PAINFUL.

What hurts is my back, my lower back to be more specific. It has, in varying degrees, ever since I managed to throw it out last Sunday.

All I was doing was cleaning out my barbecue for an afternoon cook-out. As I was standing there, only slightly stooped over, I felt a distinct "click" in the lower region of my back. There was some pain, but nothing to get excited about.

As the day wore on, however, things went from bad to worse. By nightfall I was lying on the floor, literally unable to get up. Each movement was sheer agony.

With the dawn's early light my back was beginning to feel like it had been used as a pontoon bridge for the assault across the Rhine. I called a practitioner of the healing arts.

Now, after two treatments, a couple of shots and some pills, I think things are beginning to get back to where they should be. For backbones, from what I can learn, that's quite an accomplishment.

I read somewhere that there's nothing wrong with the human back that walking on all fours wouldn't solve. It's only when we try to stand upright that we are asking for trouble.

Of all the ills that flesh is heir to, backache is probably the most common. The three books on back problems that I searched for in the library were all checked out.

I did manage to turn up an old Reader's Digest, however, in which J. D. Ratcliff lets Joe's Spine do some talking. The gist of the article is that if you treat your back right, it'll treat you right.

Okay, I apologize for all past sins and mistakes. Now if you would be so kind as to allow me to tie my shoe lace...

By act of Congress, Tuesday has been proclaimed a National Day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer. So far there has been no local proclamation, but that shouldn't keep anyone from carrying out the intent of the day, which strikes me as sound and needed.

The proclamation, which borrows heavily from Lincoln's similar proclamation of 1863, reads as follows:

"Whereas, it is the duty of nations, as well as of men to owe their dependence upon the overruling power of God, to confess their sins and transgressions, in humble sorrow, yet with assured hope that genuine repentance will lead to mercy and pardon, and to recognize the sublime truth, announced in the Holy Scriptures and proven by all history, that those nations are blessed whose God is Lord; and

"Whereas, we know that we have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of Heaven; we have been preserved these many years in peace and prosperity; we have grown in numbers, wealth and power as no other nation has ever grown; but we have forgotten God; and

"Whereas, we have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace, and multiplied and enriched us; and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own; and

"Whereas, intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made us; and

"Whereas, we have made such an idol out of our pursuit of "national security" that we have forgotten that only God can be the ultimate guardian of our true livelihood and safety; and

"Whereas, we have failed to respond, personally and collectively, with sacrifice and uncompromised commitment to the unmet needs of our fellow man, both at home and abroad; as a people, we have become so absorbed with the selfish pursuits of pleasure and profit that we have blinded ourselves to God's standard of justice and righteousness for this society; and

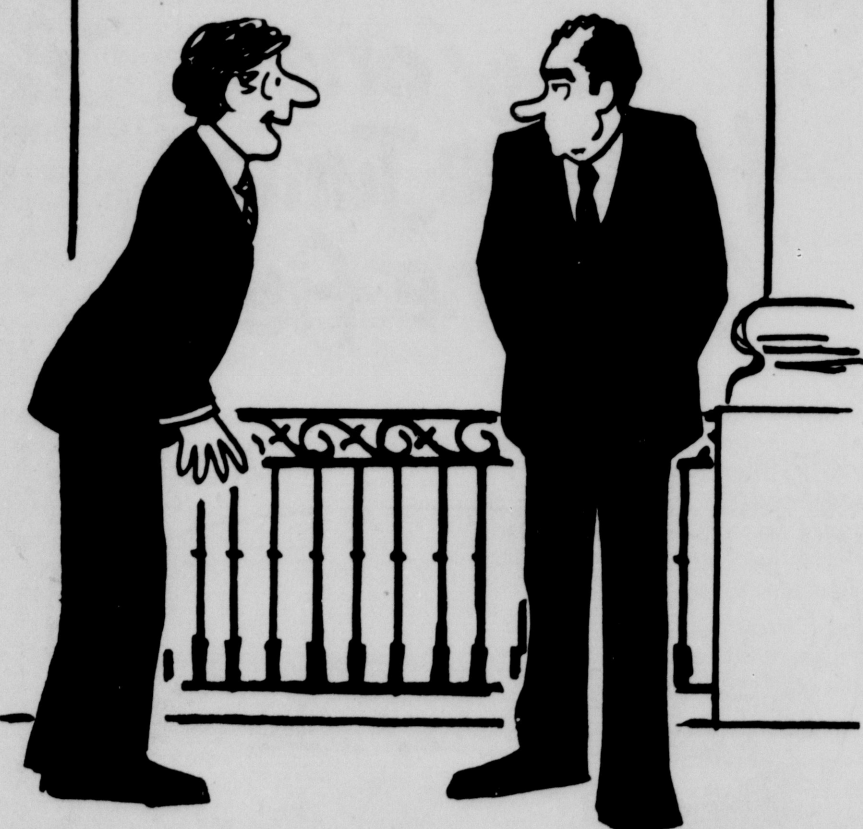

"Whereas, it therefore behooves us to humble ourselves before Almighty God, to confess our national sins, and to pray for clemency and forgiveness; Now, therefore be it

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled, that the Congress hereby proclaims that April 30, 1974 be a National Day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer; and calls upon the people of our nation to humble ourselves as we see fit, before our Creator to acknowledge our final dependence upon Him and to repent of our national sins."

Service cut not fair

After reading the article in the April 16 Sedalia Democrat about the reason why the second run of the daily mail service between Sedalia and its satellite offices was being cut, we feel compelled to answer Mr. Cassing's reasons.

Mr. Cassing stated that the mid-day runs was discontinued to save fuel, but we would say that about one and one-half years ago the post office had seven vehicles and now they have about 25. If fuel was a factor why not cut out the mounted routes in Sedalia, which would save much more fuel and money?

According to Mr. Cassing all mail that used to come in on the mid-day run was disbursed at 8:30 p.m. We have been told by our carriers and other postal people that mail mailed by 3 p.m. was dispatched to the west on a truck at 4:30 p.m. which runs between Jefferson City and Sedalia to Kansas City. Has this run also been cut off?

Mr. Cassing also said the cut in service was ordered by the district office in Wichita, Kan., who gave a pledge to President Nixon to save 10 per cent in fuel consumption. We feel that if the Sedalia post office had eliminated the mounted routes approximately 10 per cent savings in fuel could have been realized without any cut in service.

Now the public has been asked to suffer the increase in postal rates and to also give up service. We ask, is this fair?

According to the Postmaster General Klassen and Mr. Cassing, who is area mail manager, service is all that the post office has to offer. If that is so, let's put back the second run to the associate offices and give the needed services to the communities involved.

Rozelle: Exciting package

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with increasing criticism that its game had become dull, the National Football League has struck back with the most sweeping set of rule changes for professional football in 40 years.

"It's an exciting package," said Commissioner Pete Rozelle, unveiling the changes that are designed to open up defenses and reduce the ever-increasing roll field goals have played in the pro game recently.

Besides introducing a 15-minute sudden death overtime period to settle ties, the NFL moved the goal posts to the end line, meaning that field goal kickers will have to boot those three-pointers 10 yards farther than they have been. Also, missed field goals will return the ball to the line of scrimmage or 20-yard line, whichever is farther from the goal line.

Other changes also were adopted to protect wide receivers from the downfield battering they have been exposed to recently, reducing the penalty for offensive holding, tripping and illegal use of hands from 15 yards to 10 yards, and making illegal the dangerous crack back blocks that have caused many injuries.

Not since 1933 when the league moved to allow forward passing from anywhere behind the line of scrimmage have such widespread alterations been made in the sport. That was the same year the goal posts were moved from the back of the end zone to the goal line to encourage field goal kicking.

"But in those days, guys weren't kicking 55-yard field goals," noted Jim Kensil, executive director of the NFL.

Field goal kickers reacted predictably. They are less than thrilled with the changes.

"These changes are going to make the game even more conservative than it is now," said Miami's Garo Yepremian. "Moving the goal posts to the back of the end zone is one of the worst rules they could possibly have put in. Coaches will send in their punter instead of trying the long field goals and all we will have are punters booming the ball through the end zone."

Jan Stenerud... business slowing

NFL moves goal posts, adds sudden death

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Coach Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs describes the National Football League rules changes as "dramatic changes, and everyone will understand."

Jan Stenerud, the Chiefs' placekicker, says the changes will put more pressure on players attempting field goals.

Under changes made by the NFL Thursday, there will be a sudden death playoff, kickoffs will be executed from the 35-yard line, the ball will be returned to the scrimmage line or the 20-yard line whichever is farther from the goal line on missed field goals and the goal posts will be moved back 10 yards from the goal line to the end line.

"We have always made rule changes but most of them were so subtle the average fan didn't understand them," said Stram. "These are dramatic changes, and everyone will understand."

Stram said moving the goal posts back was "good because it opens up the end zone, both on offense and defense."

The Chiefs coach was disappointed, however, because the NFL did not install the two-point conversion and termed the 15-minute overtime period on tied games as "not a true sudden death."

"I had been hoping for sudden death and the two-point conversion because they provide a couple of more ways to win."

Stram said bringing the ball back the scrimmage line after a missed field goal "eliminates the opportunity to score three points in certain situations. Now we'll see more punting."

Stenerud indicated he thinks the changes won't accomplish what the NFL hopes to accomplish.

"They wanted to bring about more scoring," Stenerud said, "but I think now there will be even less scoring. The kickers are getting caught up in something we had nothing to do with. The problem is that the defenses are too strong."

Stenerud said returning the ball to the scrimmage line on missed field goals will result in "a punting contest. Now, instead of a field goal try, a team will punt into the end zone or try for the corner."

He added that sudden death "will put even more pressure on a field goal kicker."

Stenerud concluded there will be much more defense next season.

"I may be wrong," he said. "We'll see next season."

Hank Stram... dramatic changes

Bakken 'in favor' of rules changes

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Bakken, the St. Louis Cardinals' veteran place kicker of 12 seasons, thinks the new rules adopted by the National Football League Thursday are good ones.

Even the one that returns the ball to the 20-yard line or line of scrimmage on missed field goals.

"I'm in favor of them because it's for the betterment of the spectators," Bakken said Thursday. "And let's face it, that's why we're out there."

Bakken said the field goal rule will actually help accurate kickers.

"For the guy who is accurate, it's a hecuva deal. The coaches are going to be reluctant to try those long field goals with their wild, booming kickers," he said.

Bakken added that the rule would not replace place kickers, just make coaches more conservative outside the 30.

Bakken's coach, Don Coryell, also likes the rule changes—at least most of them.

One he's not unsure about is that which requires a punting team to remain at the line of scrimmage until the ball is kicked.

Coryell said such a rule would allow emphasis to be placed on the out-of-bounds, or short, high punt.

But the Cardinal coach said he particularly liked the new rules that limit the contact of defensive backs with receivers on pass plays and those restricting the type of block a receiver can use. The result, he said, will be less "unnecessary" injuries.

Pinson, Splitterff team up

Royals end trip with victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Vada Pinson took a lead off first base and a fan yelled a familiar refrain: "Don't you ever get old?"

The answer, of course, is

"no."

Baseball's reknown "relic" has been hearing that question for many of his 16 years in the major leagues and continues to not act his age.

"I feel like I can play for a couple of more years if I take care of myself," said Pinson after taking care of the New York Yankees with two runs batted in during Thursday's 5-1 Kansas City victory. At 35, Pinson is a svelte 190 pounds and appears just as eager as the day he first hit a ball for the Cincinnati Reds. Since then, the graceful outfielder has played for the California Angels and the Royals, carrying around a lifetime batting average of nearly .290.

"Yes, they're surprised to still see the old moneysinger standing," said Pinson, ribbing himself. "But I feel great. And I'm still able to help a team in some way."

Unlike many others his junior, Pinson endures because of a unique desire.

"I still love the game," he said, his eyes smiling all the while. "I get butterflies like any rookie. And should this feeling leave me, then I'll know that it's time for me to leave the game."

Pinson also endures because of his powerful legs. They're usually the first thing that betrays aging ballplayers.

"I run a lot in the off-season," said Pinson. "My legs are the most important thing. If I want to stick around a while I must take care of myself."

Pinson is not one to cherish records, but keeps moving up on baseball's all-time hit list and continues to zero in on 3,000 hits and the glamorous 20-year career mark.

It was incorrectly reported that the Sedalia Smith-Cotton girls track team defeated Marshall Wednesday afternoon in Jennie Jaynes Stadium, 59-50.

Bruins' Big Line strikes; series even

CHICAGO (AP) — Boston's Big Line, anchored by Phil Esposito, finally came front and center Thursday night and the Bruins waltzed off with a 5-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks to tie their best-of-7 semifinal Stanley Cup series at two games each.

Esposito and linemates Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman all scored and the Bruins, noted more for their offense, protected a two-goal lead in the final period with a picket-fence defense.

"The Big Line was terrific tonight," crowed Bruin Coach Bep Guidolin. The previously hadn't scored as a threesome in the current series.

Hodge was the one who made the key goal Thursday night. The Hawks had taken a 1-0 lead on a goal by Pit Martin but Boston tied it on Greg Shepard's seventh playoff goal.

Then, with nine seconds left in the first period, Hodge connected for a 2-1 lead which the Bruins never relinquished. Esposito boosted the lead to 3-1 at 10:29 of the second period and Cashman put the cover on the victory with an empty-net goal at 19:31 after Esposito had been stopped by Dick Redmond on his empty goal attempt.

The series now goes to Boston for a game Sunday night and returns to Chicago next Tuesday night. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played in Boston.

Guidolin, who earlier had threatened to bench Hodge in favor of rookie Gilles Gilbert and the Boston defense were terrific — especially after the Bruins had taken their 4-2 lead in the second period.

In fact, Gilbert even got in on the scoring and picked up an assist on Esposito's goal as he cleared the puck to Hodge, who tossed it ahead to Esposito.

been feeling well and Cash and I have been coming off injuries."

While the Big Line was doing its thing, goalie Gilles Gilbert and the Boston defense were terrific — especially after the Bruins had taken their 4-2 lead in the second period.

Phil then came in alone on his brother Tony Esposito, the Chicago goalie, and pumped in the score after two fine laces.

The Black Hawks lost the services of Dennis Hull in the second period because of a muscle spasm.

"It's down to two-out-of-three now," said Reay. "They played very well. We could have played better. But we realize we're up against a very good hockey club."

Wins Drake decathlon

Wanamaker repeats

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—The decathlon is just "a hobby," Rick Wanamaker says, and for a while he can make you believe that.

The lanky ex-Drake University basketball and track stand-out captured the 10-event, two-day test at the 65th Drake Relays with ease, scoring 7,543 points.

"I just do it for fun now, something I can mix with my job," said the 6-foot-8 Des Moines real estate salesman after he wrapped up an easy victory Thursday.

"I don't devote the time I did a couple of years ago," he continued. "I would say I work at it only eight hours a week, and that's about 20 per cent of the time I put in two years ago."

But things have changed a lot for 26-year-old Wanamaker, who two years ago was rated one of America's brightest decathlon hopes.

Injuries intervened and he failed to make the 1972 U.S. Olympic team. But he hasn't give up the sport.

Does that mean he's looking to the 1976 Olympics?

"The Olympics can be a goal that's quite disappointing—as it was for me," he said. "But it's really way too early to tell. A lot could happen in the next two years."

Twenty finals were on the schedule Friday as the Drake track and field carnival moved into its final two days. As many as 19 major records were with-in range of the field that includes three world record-holders.

Wanamaker, the winner here in 1971, set no records, and neither did his competition.

Drake senior Steve Cady was a surprise leader after the first day, and held the lead through the first event Thursday before disappointment struck.

Cady fouled on all three of his discus tries, and fell from first to last as he came up scoreless in the event. Wanamaker took the lead and never relinquished it.

Orr speeds away

Chicago Black Hawks' Bill White (2) tries to stop Boston Bruins' Bobby Orr (4), who streaks toward the goal with the puck in the first period of the Chicago-Boston Stanley Cup Playoff game Thursday night in Chicago. The Bruins won the game, 5-2.

Pacers knot ABA series; deciding game Saturday

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — "That was a pretty good trick," said Indiana Pacers Coach Bobby Leonard.

"It was atrocious," said Utah Stars Coach Joe Mullaney.

The differing viewpoints came after the Pacers' 91-89 victory over the Stars Thursday night in the sixth game of their best-of-seven American Basketball Association Western Division finals.

The deciding game will be Saturday night in Salt Lake City.

The "trick" Leonard referred to is Indiana's comeback to even the series 3-3 after losing the first three matches.

"I don't know if we can come all the way back and win the series," Leonard said. "We will have to play a lot better ball than we did tonight."

"It would be the first time anyone in this league has been down 3-0 and won the next four. I think it probably is the first time anyone had been down 3-0 and come back to even tie the series."

"We just shot atrociously," Mullaney said. "Thirty-eight per cent for the game just isn't like us. That's not going to happen to us many nights."

"I just hope it doesn't happen again Saturday night."

The Stars fell just short of stopping Indiana. After leading 2-0 and 4-2, Utah's shooting touch turned to stone.

Indiana surged in front by as many as 15 points and hit 62 per cent from the floor in the first quarter. The Stars, meanwhile, could only connect on 27 per cent. The shooting evened out somewhat late in the game.

but the Stars could never dig themselves out of their first-quarter hole.

In the final period, Utah closed within one, 81-80 and 83-82, but the Pacers held on. Although Indiana missed four of eight free throws in the final 90 seconds, the Stars still couldn't close the gap.

Rick Mount dropped a three-point goal with 12 seconds to go, bringing Utah within one again, 90-89. George McGinnis sank one of two free throws for the final count.

Willie Wise missed a short jump shot as the clock ran out. John Beasley rebounded the shot and put it in, but it was too late.

McGinnis topped Indiana with 23 points and 16 rebounds. Wise had 24 points and 10 rebounds, and Jimmy Jones added 22 for the Stars.

Flyers' lead cut to 2-1

Rangers outmuscle Flyers; 108 penalty minutes called

NEW YORK (AP) — The casualty lists are beginning to mount in the small-sized war being staged between the New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

It's being advertised as the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup semifinal series and the Flyers lead 2-1 after dropping Thursday night's 5-3 brawl, but make no mistake about it — this is a war, both in words and deeds.

Referee Bryan Lewis whistled 108 penalty minutes, 81 of them against the Flyers including two misconducts to the NHL's record-setting badman, Dave Schultz, and one each to Ross Lonsberry and Andre Dupont. Schultz accumulated 31 penalty minutes in the game raising his total for seven playoff games this season to 79 minutes. The Stanley Cup record for a single playoff year is 80 set by Montreal's John Ferguson in 1969, but he needed 14 games to accomplish that total.

Most of the rough stuff came after third period goals by Brad Park and Rod Gilbert had capped a Ranger comeback that wiped out a 3-1 Flyer lead. Schultz started playing ping pong, using Gilbert as the ball just before a faceoff in Philadelphia's zone. Emile Francis, general manager-coach of the Rangers, quickly sent Ron Harris, who's more sturdily constructed than Gilbert, out to face Schultz.

The puck was dropped but both Schultz and Harris never moved, eyeing each other instead. "He said, 'C'mon, let's go,'" recalled Harris and the two big men dropped their gloves and began circling. Soon, Schultz was challenging the Ranger bench in general.

and Francis in particular.

"I was just talking to Francis," said Schultz. "Francis is always mouthing off."

Wildcats nip

Skyline, 3-2

WARSAW — Tim Hedrick spun a three-hitter and struck out 12 batters as the Warsaw Wildcats edged Skyline in high school baseball here Thursday evening, 3-2.

Tom Grable stole four bases and scored all three of the Wildcats' runs. Chris Bowlby and Greg Buntun each had a pair of hits.

Alfred Harmon was the losing pitcher.

Warsaw's next action is with Deepwater in the district tournament at Lowry City.

Allen Miller's 7-under tops Tallahassee field

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — "It looks like one of the young players who hasn't won might win this tournament," declared 24-year-old Tom Watson after looking at the leader board at the Tallahassee Open.

On top of the pack after Thursday's opening round was Allen Miller, a 25-year-old Professional Golfers Association tour regular for three years whose best finish was as a runner-up at Memphis in 1973.

Miller shot a seven-under-par 65 on the par 72, 7,234 yard Killbuck Golf and Country Club course to move two shots ahead of Watson. Dan Sikes and Mike McCullough, at 68 were Ken Still, Larry Hinson, Ross Randall and Eddie Pearce and at 69 Homero Blancas, Bruce Devlin, Rod Funseth, Gil Morgan and Martin Bohlen.

Even the older pros here are victory-starved. The tournament draws golfers who failed to win an event during the past year to qualify for this week-end's rich Tournament of Champions at LaCosta, Calif.

Hinson, for example, hasn't won in four years.

Randall, 28, of Tallahassee, is among those seeking his first title ever. The five-year veteran has never finished higher than 11th and for a while was leading Thursday's round.

The 146-man field will be cut to the low 70 scores after today's round. Chuck Courtney, who won the first Tallahassee Open in 1969, became the first casualty when he withdrew after posting a three-over par 39 for nine holes.

First prize money is $18,000.

Buddy Allin sets pace at La Costa

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Buddy Allin, a sly, quiet, self-effacing little man, says he's surprised to be leading golf's prestigious, $200,000 Tournament of Champions.

And he'll be even more surprised if he wins it.

"I don't expect to win," the skinny, freckle-faced redhead said Thursday after his opening 66 had set the pace for the field of 25 men who have won regular season tournaments for the last 12 months.

"Realistically, with all the players you have here, I can't expect to win. I'd be very surprised if I do. All I want to do is to try to keep on playing pretty good."

Allin's six-under-par effort on the 6,685-yard La Costa Country Club course gave him a one-stroke advantage over Lanny Wadkins, who was alone in second with a 67 in the mild, sunny weather.

Veteran Miller Barber had a 69 and was followed by a group of four at 70, Dave Hill, Gene Littler, John Mahaffey and left-hander Bob Charles of New Zealand.

Some of the game's great names had their problems in the sometimes windy weather, however. British Open champion Tom Weiskopf was five strokes behind at 71. Johnny Miller, already a four-time winner this season, and Lee Trevino had 75s and beat only one man in the field.

Jack Nicklaus matched par 72.

Arnold Palmer failed to qualify for this tournament for the first time in two decades. Masters champion Gary Player had signed a previous commitment and also is among the missing.

Wehking coached in Sedalia for the first two years SFCC was in operation. He resigned after the 1969-70 season to take an assistant coaching position at Southern Illinois University. Wehking replaces Rod Clarkson, who coached here for one year.

'Resort' liquor measure signed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Persons traveling through Missouri this fall will be able to enjoy a cocktail at certain motels and restaurants along the way, thanks to a resort liquor law signed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond this week.

The label "resort" is something of a misnomer, however, because under the new law motels and restaurants in counties that do not have liquor by the drink need not be near lakes to sell drinks. Under current law, resorts near large lakes may sell liquor by the drink.

If a motel has 40 rooms and a restaurant which makes more than 60 per cent of its profit on food, liquor by the drink may be sold.

Also, a restaurant alone, which has grossed $100,000 on food each year for the past two years can get a retail liquor by the drink license. Such establishments may also apply for a Sunday liquor license.

State Liquor Control Supervisor Michael Garrett said he expects many motels in out-state Missouri to "leap" for licenses under the new law.

Garrett said Missouri will receive added revenue from the sale of liquor by the drink and Sunday licenses. Local governments will also reap sales benefits, he said.

The resort licenses cost $300 a year from the state and a county can also charge $300. In addition if the resort is in a city the city can charge another $450 for the resort license.

For Sunday liquor licenses, the state must be paid $200 a year. Counties may charge the same sum. Cities also can charge $300 for Sunday licenses.

Under the new law local options either for or opposed to liquor by the drink do not apply to qualified resorts, the law says. At present, the law says only resorts in counties bordering lakes with 25 miles of shoreline—Table Rock Lake and Lake of the Ozarks—can sell liquor by the drink and be exempt from local option.

A similar bill was passed last year but the governor vetoed it, saying as written it would make resorts subject to local option if the area were annexed by a city which banned liquor by the drink.

Pay TV battle continues

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The sound of clashing claims is rising these days because of pay TV, the system by which cable TV subscribers pay extra to see movies and programs commercial TV doesn't offer.

The combatants are the National Cable Television Association and the National Association of Broadcasters. The battleground is what the NAB calls the threat of "siphoning" by the struggling pay TV industry.

The NAB, representing 531 TV stations and the three networks, describes siphoning as "the removal of popular programming, principally movies and sports, from free commercial TV to pay cable television."

It claims if steps aren't taken, pay TV may someday be able to outbid commercial TV for major attractions and viewers either will have to pay for those shows or do without. "Free" TV, of course, only applies when you don't buy the sponsor's product.

The NCTA, representing half the nation's 3,000 cable-TV operators, calls the siphoning charge hogwash. It says it only wants federal rules eased enough to let pay TV try to prove itself in the marketplace.

The battle basically centers on two Federal Communications Commission rules that cable-TV interests would like liberalized in varying degrees. The NAB says it wants those left alone.

One rule bars pay TV from showing movies that have been in theatrical release less than two years, and only allows once-a-month showings of movies 10 years old or older.

The other prohibits pay cable from showing sports that have been on commercial TV the previous three years.

Ralph M. Baruch, head of NCTA's pay cable committee, says what his group specifically asks of the FCC is a three-year test suspension of its pay-TV rules, but with one important caveat.

That, he said, would be "the assurance that nothing which is now presented on conventional television could be diverted to pay cable."

Baruch, president of Viacom, Inc., a TV syndication firm that says it operates 110 cable-TV systems, said under the proposal the FCC would "monitor what happens to various attractions."

"Wherever it found these procedures weren't fulfilling the public interest, it could step in at any time and change them."

"We don't buy the test period idea," says Robert Resor, the NAB's chief "Free Television" campaigner. Even with the restrictions Baruch proposes, he says, "we feel that the process, once started, would be irreversible."

How many pay TV systems are there now? The FCC says it has no figures, but the NCTA estimates there are approximately 45 which serve a total of 55,000 subscribers.

Middleman's price margins widen; farmer's share drops

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If middlemen had passed along all the reductions in farm prices last month, consumers would have seen retail food costs drop instead of rise again, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

Instead, new figures showed Wednesday, middlemen let their margins widen 5.2 per cent while farmers saw their share of food spending drop 4.2 per cent from February to March.

The figures were compiled by USDA experts, based in part on other government readings on retail food prices in March. Put together, the statistics showed a market basket of U.S. farm-produced food rose 0.9 per cent during the month to another record of $1.747 on an annual basis.

As used by the department, the market basket includes enough store-bought food for a household of 3.2 persons for an entire year. The basket is used as an indicator to show how consumer food spending splits up among farmers and middlemen processors and sellers.

The March figures showed farmers received an equivalent of $762 of the consumer basket, down $33 from February. But the middleman share was $985 in March, up $48 from February, thus more than offsetting the decline in farm value.

Compared with March 1973, the new figures showed the farm share gained 15.1 per cent of $100 and that middleman margins rose 23.8 per cent or $189 during the year. Over-all, the cost of the basket to consumers jumped 19.9 per cent or $289 during the 12 months.

An official report by the department said "sharply wider spreads" occurred during the month for meats, oilseeds, bakery goods, cereal products and fresh vegetables while those for poultry and eggs decreased.

Returns to farmers dropped the most for beef cattle, hogs, eggs, wheat and some fresh vegetables, the report said. That left farmers with an average of 43.6 cents of each dollar consumers spent on food during March, down from 45.9 cents in February.

The report showed choice steers sold by producers on Midwest markets averaged $42.22 per 100 pounds of live-weight in March, down from $46.11 in February. Hogs were $34.88 per 100 pounds, compared with $39.73 a month earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's corn inventory on April

1 totaled slightly more than 2.85 billion bushels, down 15 per cent from the same date last year, says the Agriculture Department.

Stocks of the four major feed grains—corn, oats, barley and sorghum—totalled 102.7 million tons, 14 per cent less than on April 1 last year, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Wednesday.

The department was expected to issue today updated figures showing how the supply and demand situation for the remainder of the 1974-75 season is shaping up and how the April 1 inventory affects the outlook.

The April 1 wheat inventory was reported at 550 million bushels 41 per cent below a year earlier and the lowest stockpile for the date since 1952, the report said.

Nixon optimistic on the economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, campaigning to rebuild confidence in his Watergate-troubled administration, has delivered another optimistic forecast on the economy.

On a quick trip to Jackson, Miss., on Thursday, Nixon said the economy has been through "what I believe is the lowest point of the downturn . . . The last half of the year we will see the economy moving forward again."

The President received a warm reception in Mississippi, the state that gave the largest plurality to his re-election. A standing-room-only crowd of 12,000 frequently interrupted his address with applause.

The White House is arranging other Nixon appearances in sections of the country considered friendly to the President. He will appear in Phoenix, Ariz., on May 3, and in Spokane, Wash., May 4. Aides also are arranging a May 11 presidential trip to Oklahoma State University commencement exercises.

In Jackson, Nixon blamed food and energy for feeding the rise in prices. He added, "The rise in food prices will tend as we go through the balance of the year to level off."

He singled out the automobile and housing industries as two trouble spots in the economy. He said the auto industry is brightening and that he will propose new programs within two weeks to stimulate the sagging housing industry.

Nixon said he could "flatly predict '75 will be a very good year."

And 1976, he added, "will be the best year in American history — the most prosperous, the most free."

After returning to Washington, Nixon went for an evening cruise on the presidential yacht, "Sequoia," and then entertained Republican National Committee members at a White House reception.

Nixon gave a short, upbeat speech to the committee members about Republican prospects. He said the economy and other areas would improve and that the GOP would do better in November than it did this spring in five special congressional elections, four of which were won by Democrats.

The President did not repeat the promise to campaign for Republican candidates that he had made to considerable applause the last time the committee met, in September. He also made no direct reference to Watergate.

Kiwanians learn of programs

School programs for the retarded and those with learning disabilities were described to Kiwanians at their meeting Thursday noon at the Bothwell Hotel.

George Marsh, who is director of special education and learning disabilities programs in the Sedalia school district, said special programs can equip children who several years ago would have been dismissed as uneducable with the means to become productive members of society.

"If we don't provide the services these children need, they aren't going to have successful lives," Marsh said.

Great Americans such as George Washington, Woodrow Wilson and Albert Einstein all suffered some form of learning disability at one point in their lives, Marsh pointed out.

The Sedalia program isolates neurological, psychological, visual and auditory factors that contribute to making otherwise normal children have difficulties in learning, said Marsh. He said there are currently special classes for deaf and hard of hearing children, and as well as those who are orthopedically handicapped.

"People are amazed when they find out a county our size provides so much diversity in programs," said Marsh.

Marsh said he was especially concerned that the proposed district levy increase pass so that adequate services of such a nature can continue to be provided.

Lindy Wilson introduced the speaker.

Bob Gardner officially inducted the following members into the club: Lynn Harrison, Bill Jackson, Charles Rayl, Al Henningsen and Dennis Borchardt.

Joplin teachers reject board's offer on wages

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — The Joplin Community Teachers Association has rejected the school board's wage offer by an overwhelming margin, a spokesman says.

The vote Thursday night was against a guaranteed 2 to 3 per cent increase, or a 7 per cent to 9 per cent raise based on success of a tax levy.

The board has suggested an election May 17 on a 35-cent levy increase, the limit that can be approved by a simple majority of voters.

The CTA feels voters will support a higher levy, which will need two-thirds approval.

The CTA, allied with the National Education Association, claims to represent most of about 300 teachers in the system. Another group, the Joplin Education Association, is vying for representation of the teachers.

Jones asks Fair help

Stressing the need for increased public awareness "of what the Missouri State Fair is all about," Fair Secretary Ron Jones met Wednesday with the Chamber of Commerce board of directors to discuss the Chamber's role in promoting the annual August event.

Attending the meeting with Jones was Mike Brown, an executive with the Kansas City advertising firm of Christenson, Barclay and Shaw Inc. The firm has the public relations contract for the 1974 Fair.

"The Fair needs a few friends"

"From the public standpoint, the Fair needs a few friends," Jones said. "At the time the Fair opened here at the turn of the century, we were still primarily a rural-oriented state. The agriculture emphasis of the Fair was understood by most of the people. However, in the last 20 years or so, the balance of power in the state legislature has shifted from rural to urban. The urban legislators are naturally more concerned about the situations affecting their constituents most. In my contacts with them, I get the idea they aren't as interested in the Fair as they could be. They still think of it in terms of carnivals and cattle."

The Fair, Jones emphasized, "has always been agriculturally-oriented and it goes without saying that we'll continue to be so. However, we've got a lot more to offer now and we just have to let more people know about it."

"They still think of it in terms of carnivals and cattle"

Competition has increased the need for advertising the Fair, said Jones.

"We have to face the fact that there is more and more competition for the recreational dollars of Missourians," he said. "There is now Silver Dollar City in the Ozarks, Six Flags Over Mid-America in St. Louis and World's of Fun in Kansas City. There's also pro football games and baseball. We're going to have to compete for the attention of the people more than ever before."

His efforts in this area, Jones indicated, have been hampered by an advertising budget cut of $25,000 since 1972. "In that year," he explained, "the Fair was appropriated $100,000 to spend on advertising. This figure was cut to $67,000 in 1973 but we managed to get it upped somewhat to $75,000 this year."

This factor, Jones told the Chamber directors, increased the importance of volunteer promotional assistance.

One way the Chamber could help, he suggested, would be for Chamber members to personally discuss the importance of the Fair with state legislators.

"Naturally, as secretary of the Fair, my motives and pleas are somewhat suspect," Jones said. "They (legislators) could pass off what I had to say a lot easier than they could what local businessmen would have to say."

Advertising activities this year, Jones said, will center on urban audiences, adding: "our research conducted during last year's Fair revealed that the largest number of Fair-goers came from these areas in the state."

"We can't rely solely on the traditional agricultural audiences," Jones continued, "because we would then be in the position of trying to draw more and more money from less and less people."

"We can't rely solely on agricultural audiences"

Despite the urban advertising emphasis, Jones stressed that the customary farm focus of the Fair "will be maintained."

He is particularly emphatic on this point, Jones explained, "because after last year's Fair, I visited several other state fairs across the country. Some of them have turned into what I call 'asphalt jungles.' I'm determined that's not going to happen here."

After discussing several proposed means of Chamber participation, it was agreed that the board would encourage the cooperation of Chamber members in affixing advertising stickers to their correspondence this summer. The stickers would be purchased by the state. The possibility of securing State Fair postage meters was discussed, with no firm decision being reached.

It was also decided that the Chamber would cooperate in distributing "State Fair" buttons, match books and, possibly, paper table place mats.

"The Fair is willing to purchase these items," Jones said. "But they're only good if they're circulated. That's where you come in."

The Chamber also agreed to cooperate in

Mitchell, Stans termed 'liars'

NEW YORK (AP) — The criminal conspiracy case against former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and onetime Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans neared a federal court jury Thursday, after the government called the former cabinet colleagues "liars under oath, not just once, not just twice, but many times."

"The law says you cannot lie under oath," Asst. U.S. Atty. John Wing told the nine men and three women jurors in ringing tones, "no matter who you are, how big or how small. That oath is the cornerstone of our judicial system."

When Wing completed his 6½-hour final summation, which he had begun Wednesday, Mitchell's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr., asked for a mistrial, because of "repeated characterizations of the defendants as liars."

Judge Lee P. Gagliardi denied the motion. Then he launched into a 137-page charge to the jury. He advised them on the points of law to consider in reaching their verdict, after first telling them: "You are to perform this final duty in an atmosphere of complete calm and impartiality."

Mitchell, 60, and Stans, 66, are accused of a conspiracy to obstruct a massive Securities and Exchange Commission fraud investigation into the corporate empire of international financier Robert L. Vesco.

The government charges it was an influence-peddling scheme paid for by Vesco's secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign.

The pair are jointly charged with one count of conspiracy and two of obstructing justice, plus six separate counts each of perjury. The maximum penalty attached to all counts is 45 years in federal prison.

"Each count must be considered separately," Gagliardi instructed the jury.

The historic case moved toward its climax on a bright, unseasonably cool day, the wind of April whining outside the first-floor courtroom in Manhattan's downtown Foley Square. It had begun in the cruel throes of winter last Feb. 19.

The defendants at the end were in pretty much the same posture as they had been at the outset. Mitchell's chair was tilted on its rear legs and he rocked slowly back and forth from time to time. Stans sat more stiffly in his seat at a separate defense table.

The two men were the first of cabinet rank to stand trial in the 50 years since the Teapot Dome scandal of 1923, involving the sale of naval oil reserves to private firms during the administration of President Warren G. Harding.

In that case, Interior Secretary Albert Fall was sentenced to a year in prison for taking bribes, while Atty. Gen. Harry Daugherty went free as a result of a hung jury.

'Zebra' search halt ordered by judge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge issued a preliminary injunction Thursday to halt the widespread stopping of young blacks in the controversial Operation Zebra search for the killer or killers of 12 whites.

U.S. District Court Judge Alfonso Zirpoli issued the injunction after hearing arguments by civil liberties groups that the week-old police practice was unconstitutional and a violation of black men's rights.

The judge said no one may be stopped in the hunt for the killer unless there is other independent evidence, such as conduct, which creates a reasonable suspicion that the person is committing a crime.

The injunction also prohibits searching or frisking any person solely because he appears to fit the composite sketch of the Zebra killer.

Zirpoli agreed that revised guidelines issued by Police Chief Donald Scott earlier in the day included detailed constitutional safeguards.

But the judge said, "An injunction is necessary in the interests of public tranquility."

The case involves lawsuits filed by the NAACP and the American Civil Liberties Union challenging the order by Mayor Joseph Alioto that police stop and search blacks who fit the description of the man or men authorities say have killed 12 whites and wounded six others in random shootings since last November. About 600 men have been stopped since last Wednesday.

Earlier, Police Chief Donald Scott told Zirpoli that a set of revised guidelines for the Zebra dragnet had been put into effect that include a provision that police observe a man's appearance and demeanor before they stop him. Under the guidelines an officer could not use a baton or other weapon during such a stop unless he was threatened physically.

At the first hearing Wednesday, Chief Police Inspector Charles A. Barca said the "Operation Zebra" dragnet was being curtailed drastically after failing to produce clues in six days of searches. He said police would only stop men "acting out of the ordinary."

Thirty-two men were stopped by police Wednesday night, about half the number questioned the previous night, a police spokesman said.

Police have said at least two and possibly four persons are involved in the shootings, code-named Zebra after the radio channel used in the investigation.

In addition to requesting an end to the searches, the suits raised objections to the police practice of issuing field interrogation cards to blacks when an officer felt that more than casual questioning was needed.

House panel narrows probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House impeachment inquiry staff reported Thursday that it is concentrating its investigation on the major Watergate allegations and President Nixon's tax problems.

The staff told the House Judiciary Committee that it is halting its inquiries into 15 of the 56 original allegations against the President.

In each of the 15 cases the staff said "either there is no substantial evidence known to the staff that supports an allegation of wrongdoing or the evidence is insufficient to justify devoting the resources required to complete a thorough investigation."

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., emphasized that the final decision on dropping any allegation would be up to committee members.

During the 2½-hour meeting the committee also voted 34 to 4 to give the White House five more days to respond to a subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations.

The White House response was put off until 10 a.m. on Tuesday.

Most of the items set aside by the staff include allegations that presidential friends and big campaign contributors received favored treatment from government agencies.

Also halted was the investigation of possible impeachable conduct in connection with the President's refusal to spend appropriated funds and his attempt to shut down the Office of Economic Opportunity without prior congressional approval.

The report said the staff is continuing its probe of allegations stemming from a $100,000 campaign contribution from billionaire Howard Hughes, a $200,000 cash contribution from financier Robert L. Vesco, contributions from the dairy industry and a pledge from ITT to help underwrite the 1972 Republican convention.

Much of the discussion at the meeting involved the staff's plans to examine allegations that criminal fraud may have been committed in the preparation of President Nixon's income tax returns. Both the congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and the Internal Revenue Service have declared that the President incorrectly claimed a $576,000 deduction for his donation to the government of his pre-presidential papers.

Both the committee and the IRS said that as a result of the disallowed deduction for the papers as well as other disallowed items the President owed more than $450,000 in additional taxes.

The impeachment inquiry staff noted that the joint committee "made no investigation whether or not there was criminal tax fraud for which the President is responsible."

Such an investigation is under way by the special Watergate prosecutor's office but the impeachment staff said it "is likely to be prolonged and its result will not be available to the committee under the committee's contemplated timetable."

John Doar, chief counsel for the impeachment inquiry, said the investigation of the President's taxes would concentrate on the gift of his papers.

But he emphasized "investigation of tax fraud is a complicated matter."

Doar said he intends to ask the IRS for a copy of its report on the President's taxes.

An allegation stemming from secret U.S. bombing raids in Cambodia between March 1969 and August 1973 remained under active consideration at least until next week when the committee hopes to obtain access to a Senate Armed Services Committee report.

Back to old energy ways

By ASHLEY HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

Americans are relaxing their efforts to save energy now that the visible signs of the Arab oil embargo have vanished.

A nationwide Associated Press survey found evidence of increased use of energy throughout the nation since the middle of March: more auto traffic and higher speeds, rising toll-road receipts, declining use of mass transit and greater use of electricity.

Asked about The AP survey's results, William E. Simon, former federal energy chief, said in New York Wednesday that the nation is headed for further energy trouble if the survey is accurate.

The Treasury secretary-designate emphasized that "conservation has to be a way of life" and is the cornerstone of the government's energy policy. The end of the embargo did not bring an end to the energy crisis, he said.

The United States was forced to reduce its energy consumption by the embargo imposed last October by Middle East oil producing nations.

But the oil embargo ended March 18, apparently starting Americans back on the road to their former levels of energy use. Individual conservation efforts peaked in February and the first part of March, The AP survey shows.

"The energy office has been monitoring traffic to see what people would do once the lines (at gasoline stations) disappeared. People are going back to their old driving habits," said John C. Sawhill, who replaced Simon as administrator of the Federal Energy Office.

"There are as many people on the road now as there were in September before the embargo."

And Barry Budling, an official of the Connecticut Emergency Energy Office, said: "Connecticut citizens have gone back to their old gluttonous ways, people driving at the old speeds, one person in a car, the car pools having broken up."

The increase in auto use was reflected on several toll roads.

West Virginia Turnpike traffic for the first eight days of April was reported down about 1 per cent from a year ago. It had been down 4.1 per cent in the first three months of 1974.

Receipts for Connecticut toll roads on Sunday, Feb. 3, were $31,549 — 55 per cent below a year ago. But receipts for Sunday, April 14, were $82,671 — down only 3 per cent from the year before.

And police in several states said the number of speeding citations was up.

"Since they no longer have to wait in line for gas, they feel they should no longer have to go 55," said Chief Will Bachofner of the Washington State Patrol. He said troopers issued 2,992 tickets in the first week of April this year, compared with a weekly average in 1973 of 1,480.

"They've gone wild again ... They're just flying out there," said Capt. John S. Timmerman of the South Carolina Highway Patrol, which issued 10,390 speeding tickets in February and 13,446 in March.

Decision on hospital will be made soon

American Institutional Development Co. of St. Louis will announce either Friday or Saturday where it will build a private hospital in Sedalia, company president Sigmund Oxenhandler said Thursday.

The announcement will be made, Oxenhandler said, after the company enters into final contract to purchase a site for the new hospital, to be known as the Sedalia Medical Center.

Oxenhandler has been in Sedalia this week negotiating the land purchase.

The company earlier this month exercised an option to purchase one of two sites previously selected for the proposed 150-bed, $3.5 million facility. One of the sites is at 32nd and Washington and the other behind the Ramada Inn between Highway 50 and 16th Street.

If the contract is completed, Oxenhandler said, construction will begin about late August.

Oxenhandler also said he has met this week with "all but one or two" of the approximately 15 local doctors "who previously said they would serve on the staff of the new hospital."

The meetings, Oxenhandler said, were to discuss equipment purchases for the hospital.

Earlier this month it was reported that many of the doctors who originally indicated in writing they would serve on the new hospital's staff had changed their minds.

But Oxenhandler reiterated Thursday that he still has not been notified by any of the doctors that they would withdraw from the staff.

The fact that all but one or two of the original group met with Oxenhandler this week shows continuing support for the medical facility, he said. Oxenhandler added that it would have been "pointless" for him to have asked the doctors whether they had changed their minds.

Oxenhandler earlier had said that he would not have gone ahead with his plans had he not had the local support of doctors.

"I'm going to invest $4 million," Oxenhandler said. "I'm not going to put up that kind of money without their support."

The completion date of the hospital has been set at 14 months after construction starts.

Pentagon closets are gold mines

WASHINGTON — It received hardly a mention in the newspapers, but the Pentagon last week just happened to "find" $266 million it didn't know it had.

Buchwald

It seems that the Defense Department had asked for $1.6 billion for aid to South Vietnam, but Congress had voted only $1.2 billion. Instead of the Pentagon getting upset by the cut in funds it announced that it had "found" $266 million which could make up the difference.

How did the Pentagon find the money? It's a very interesting story.

Two weeks ago two cleaning women in the Pentagon were working late at night in the basement of the building. One of the ladies was a new employee and she opened what she thought was a broom closet.

Instead of brooms and mops she saw neatly piled stacks of brand-new $100 bills.

"Henrietta," she said to the lady she was working with, "there ain't no brooms or mops in that closet. How am I supposed to get my work done when all they keep in there is money?"

Henrietta came over and looked in. "Heavens to Betsy, you're right. They expect us to clean the floors, mop the halls and dust the furniture and they don't even give us the tools to do it with. Let's find the supervisor."

They brought the supervisor back. He peered into the closet and became angry. "If I told them once I told them 100 times the only thing I want to see in broom closets is brooms. I'm going to get the duty officer."

The duty officer, a colonel, was asked to come to the basement. When he showed up he couldn't believe his eyes. "How much money do you think there is in that closet?"

"Bout $266 million," Henrietta said. "Now what about our mops?"

The colonel rushed off to call his superior at home. "General, the cleaning women just found $266 million in a broom closet in the basement."

The general was furious. "Why are you bothering me at home at this hour about $266 million? Turn it over to Lost-and-Found."

"Yes, sir," the colonel said.

The next day the Lost-and-Found officer put out notices on all the bulletin boards in the Pentagon which read: "If anyone has lost $266 million in new $100 bills, kindly pick it up as soon as possible at Lost-and-Found. If the money is not claimed within the week, it will be turned over to the South Vietnamese government."

Although there are thousands of people working in the Pentagon, no one admitted to owning the money. This caused some wild speculation. The Army said the Navy had hidden the cash in the broom closet so they could buy an extra submarine when no one was looking. The Navy said the Air Force had stashed it away for the next overrun on a new Lockheed cargo plane.

In any case, no one claimed the cash and it was turned over to six cadets of the South Vietnamese marine corps who were returning to Saigon after a visit to Parris Island.

But the discovery of the money caused a storm at the Pentagon. The secretary of defense, in a very tough memo to all personnel, said, "There will be no more storing of unaccounted funds in broom closets."

"These closets will be used in the future solely for cleaning utensils. If there is one thing I will not stand for as long as I am secretary it's a dirty Pentagon."

Thoughts on right to reply

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Back in 1913 the Florida state legislature adopted a statute that became known, in time, as the Right To Reply Law. It is a fair assumption that the act was adopted during a fit of temper at the newspapers, a condition endemic among politicians since at least the time of Thomas Jefferson.

Kilpatrick

The act says that if a newspaper "assails the personal character" of any candidate for public office, or "attacks his official record," such newspaper, on request, "shall immediately publish free of cost any reply he may make thereto, in as conspicuous a place and in the same kind of type as the matter that calls for such reply, provided such reply does not take up more space than the matter replied to."

Florida's Right To Reply Law languished almost forgotten on the books until September of 1972, when the Miami Herald ran a couple of editorials criticizing Pat Tornillo, a candidate in the Democratic primary for the state legislature. The Herald referred to Tornillo as the "czar" of the Classroom Teachers Association, accused him of "shakedown statesmanship," and said it would be "inexcusable" for the voters to send him to Tallahassee.

Tornillo dusted off the 1913 law, prepared written replies to the two editorials, and demanded they be published. Under these circumstances, with the law invoked, the Herald understandably refused. Tornillo then brought a civil action asking money damages and seeking a court order to compel publication. The trial court found the act unconstitutional — the state attorney general would not even defend it — but the Florida Supreme Court reversed and upheld the law. The Herald appealed and the U.S. Supreme Court on April 17 heard arguments in the case.

Two or three points: Though the Herald did not run the two letters Tornillo submitted, the Herald regularly had published Tornillo's letters in the past. Tornillo made no complaint of unfairness in the news columns. The Herald's sister paper, the evening News, endorsed Tornillo's candidacy.

So far as I know, virtually every professional association of newsmen and editors is praying that the Supreme Court will reverse and thus restore the trial court's original ruling. If the high court should affirm, we can foresee a rash of Right To Reply Laws across the country. The effect, in our view, would be absolutely to chill editorial criticism of candidates and incumbents. A law that compels a newspaper to publish "any reply" strikes us as a flagrant abridgment of freedom of the press.

There is, of course, an opposing point of view. Among those urging affirmative is Nicholas Johnson, formerly a member of the Federal Communications Commission, now chairman of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting. In a brief filed with the court, the committee argues that the public's "First Amendment interest in an informed electorate" justifies such laws. The people "must be armed with sufficient information about the candidates and the issues to make intelligent, informed choices."

Johnson's group argues that the FCC's "right to reply" regulation has not chilled radio give-and-take. Over the last three years the FCC has imposed only six fines (known as forfeitures) on radio stations for failure to accord air time promptly for replies to personal attacks. Considering the number of complaints, the number of fines is small.

The Tornillo case is the most important of a dozen cases before the Supreme Court having to do with freedom of speech and of the press. If the Florida act is upheld, incumbent officeholders will rejoice. Newspapers eventually may hesitate to attack their "official records" because no editor wants to be compelled to print "any reply" a politician may provide. Rather than be harassed by civil and criminal litigation, busy editors may choose to kill a critical piece before it gets in print.

Will the electorate be better informed? I doubt it. Would nationwide Right To Reply Laws make newspapers fairer? It is conceivable; but it is at least equally possible that such laws might make newspapers less robust instead.

Curtis vs. Eagleton

It looks like Missourians will be faced with a rather sharply-defined choice in next fall's senatorial election, with the announcement by Republican Thomas B. Curtis that he will once again challenge Thomas F. Eagleton, now the incumbent, for his Senate seat.

Curtis, a former 18-year veteran of the U.S. House of Representatives, was only narrowly defeated by Eagleton in the 1968 election. Curtis says this time he will run a more issue-oriented campaign, based largely on Eagleton's record, which he calls too liberal for most Missourians.

As representative from Missouri's Second Congressional District from 1950 to 1968, Curtis established a reputation as a conservative lawmaker. Eagleton, on the other hand, has been identified with the liberal Democratic wing of the Senate, which was instrumental in his being picked by Sen. George McGovern as his running mate in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Then Eagleton was dumped from the Democratic ticket after it was revealed that he had undergone periodic psychiatric treatments for depression. Although the resulting uproar was a major liability to McGovern, it proved to be boon to Eagleton's political fortunes in Missouri, where he became the beneficiary of a sizable sympathy reaction.

This factor is expected to be still strong in Eagleton's campaign this fall, two years after the McGovern debacle. Curtis' attempts to focus Missouri voters' attention to the issues, as he intends, will be watched with interest in what might otherwise be a somewhat dull political year in Missouri.

Courtroom victory

The brutal slaying of 16-year-old Karen Jones last Aug. 13 has apparently been solved with the conviction Tuesday in Columbia of Kim Eugene Phillips for second-degree murder.

The victory for the prosecution no doubt comes as good news to Sedalians, who have been understandably edgy in recent years as murders in this area have become all too frequent.

Still at large is the killer of Barbara Jean Galliher, who was strangled Aug. 15, 1970. The case is still open in the death of Otha Brown, whose body was found Feb. 6 tied to a tree near LaMonte. And so far there have been no arrests in the shooting death of Charles L. Buis, whose body was discovered in a camper here Feb. 24.

Phillips' conviction was achieved by thorough investigative work and aggressive prosecution. We hope the same skills will be applied with equal vigor to the other murder cases in which justice has yet to be done.

WASHINGTON — Rockwell International, the corporate giant, has demonstrated a strange knack for wangling government favors.

The pattern is described by investigators for Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., in an unpublished staff report. Alleging a "government tilt toward Rockwell," the report makes these explosive accusations:

✓ When the Federal Aviation Administration wanted to modernize its air fleet, then Transportation Secretary John Volpe allegedly served notice that "he would approve the acquisition of the aircraft only on the condition that they come from Rockwell International."

✓ The Coast Guard is also rebuilding its air fleet with Rockwell Sabre liners. Yet "there was no competitive program established by the Coast Guard to guarantee that the best aircraft was selected for the least amount of money," charges the report.

Independent engineers, called in by Murphy to study the program, estimate "a minimum cost overrun of $32 million with a possibility of the overrun reaching $50 million."

✓ When complaints began reaching Congress of government favoritism toward Rockwell, the report alleges, "several companies were warned that punitive action would be taken in the future if they did not 'get the hell off' of this line of approach."

✓ The report cites the findings of a House Civil Service investigation that the Transportation Department was guilty of "cronyism" and "favoritism" in loading its professional staff with employees who had once worked at Rockwell.

✓ In an earlier column, we told how Rockwell unloaded on the taxpayers a lavish, out-of-the-way $20 million building it couldn't use. We reported that the General Services Administration has agreed to take over the unoccupied Laguna Niguel, Calif., building in exchange for more desirable, government-owned property, which the corporation is eager to acquire. GSA boss Arthur Sampson, in rebuttal, called the exchange a "once-in-a-lifetime" bargain.

Merry-go-round

We spoke to Volpe in Rome, where he is now the U.S. ambassador. The former transportation secretary denied ordering the FAA to do business with Rockwell.

"I am damn sure I never did any such thing," Volpe told us. "My conscience wouldn't allow me to do it." Volpe's former FAA chief, John Shaffer, agreed emphatically that he had never been ordered to buy Rockwell planes. The contract was awarded, nevertheless, without competitive bidding.

FOOTNOTE: The Murphy investigators got their information, one of them told us, from a witness who had heard Volpe issue the Rockwell order. Three other witnesses privy to the arrangement also confirmed it, said the investigator.

DARK DOINGS: The energy crisis has made one thing perfectly clear: bureaucrats don't trust each other to turn off lights. Ever since the government acknowledged there is an energy shortage, the General Services Administration has been sending crews around to federal buildings to remove excess light bulbs.

The experts prow through offices and corridors with their light meters. When they find someone enjoying an extra lumen or two, they hustle in with their ladders and start yanking bulbs.

The great bulb raid, however, has created a storage problem. The GSA has accumulated 1.2 million fluorescent lamps and hasn't the room to keep them.

The federal raiders, therefore, have devised a grading system: the "bad" ones (though they were burning brightly when removed) are discarded; the "intermediate" ones are either donated to state agencies or put up for sale at government surplus stores; the "good" ones are stacked in warehouses.

LUCKY LUCKMAN: A mysterious, handwritten note, initiated by embattled Veterans Administrator Donald Johnson, directs that all the Veterans Administration's architectural contracts in California should be awarded to a Los Angeles engineering firm.

We have obtained a copy of the terse, handwritten order, which declares: "All A-E work in California (except Loma Linda) until further notice is to Luckman & Associates." The document is dated 12-17-71.

The instructions, according to our investigation, were not obeyed. At least six other contract awards have gone to firms other than Luckman since the memo was written. But Luckman landed by far the largest VA contracts in California, totalling just under $3 million.

Through a VA spokesman, Johnson said he had no specific recollection of the memo but did not deny its existence. Still, any charge of favoritism, he declared, was "untrue."

Jim Luckman, commenting on behalf of the firm, said it had been awarded the big-money contracts because of previous "efficient and economical" work for the VA. Of the Johnson memo, Luckman said wryly: "I wish it were true."

Informed sources suggest that Johnson, an intensely partisan Nixon man, may have been influenced by the political support the firm's head, Charles Luckman, has given to President Nixon. Luckman, the former boy wonder of the Lever Brothers soap empire, contributed $13,000 to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

Pessimistic Pete looked over the dummy and remarked, "We have a pretty good play for seven, but since we are in six I had best try to insure my contract."

Pete took his ace of diamonds, led a low spade and ducked in dummy. West held the trick and led a second diamond. Pete, ruffed led a trump to dummy's ace, ruffed a low spade, cashed his queen and dummy's king of trumps, discarded his four losing clubs on four spades and claimed his contract.

The hand is worthy of considerable study. Seven would not be a bad contract. It would make against a better break in either major suit, but with the actual distribution of the East-West cards Pete's line of play was the only one that would bring in 12 tricks.

As a further point of interest, if West had been one of those super players who see all the cards before the opening lead is made, he would have plunked the 10 of clubs on the table. Pete would have been unable to find any play to make the slam.

Donald Wayne Napier

Donald Wayne Napier, 116½ East Main, died Thursday morning at his home.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. The body is at the Ewing Funeral Home.

Police to begin issuing tickets for one-way signs

Police will begin issuing tickets to motorists who violate the one-way signs around the post office, Police Chief William Miller said Thursday.

The one-way signs were erected about two weeks ago in an effort to ease the traffic congestion around the post office.

"The signs have been up for a couple of weeks now and we've issued quite a few warnings," Miller said. "A few people are still going the wrong way, but we feel that it's been a long enough period of time for motorists to have become accustomed to the change."

The one-way system is on a 90-day trial basis but will become permanent if the plan eases traffic congestion around the post office.

Autopsy is ordered in death of man, 48

An autopsy was to be performed late Thursday night on the body of Donald Nadier, 48, 116½ East Main, Apt. 7, after he was found dead in his apartment at 10:33 a.m. Thursday.

Fred Evans, 1917 West Third, discovered Nadier's body Thursday morning and called police. County Coroner John Owens was summoned and pronounced Nadier dead at 11:15 a.m.

Dr. J.E. Block, Mr. Nadier's physician, requested the autopsy be performed. Dr. Block said foul play was not suspected in the death, but that Mr. Nadier was dead for two days before being discovered, this making it impossible to determine a cause of death without an autopsy.

Dr. Larry Henry was to perform the autopsy.

The body will then be taken to Carthage, Ohio, where funeral mass will be held Monday at St. Charles Seminary. Burial will be in St. Charles Cemetery.

Inflation may hit insurance

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Spiraling inflation could necessitate an increase in automobile insurance rates even though statistics furnished by the state indicate accidents and the amount of travel have declined, apparently due to the energy crisis, insurance industry officials said Thursday.

"While the frequency of accidents has been decreasing ... the trend of costs for those accidents has been steadily climbing, presumed by what we call the other crisis—inflation," John Riley, vice president of SAFECO Insurance Co., told a hearing chaired by State Insurance Supt. Edward G. Farmer.

The hearing was called at the request of the Missouri House earlier this month to review automobile insurance rates in light of the gasoline shortage.

Farmer said he hoped to compile a report on the testimony gathered from insurance industry spokesmen, state officials and the public within 10 days. The House has directed him to make that report public.

Based on the information gained through the testimony, Farmer said he hoped to make some recommendations including establishment of an office to actively monitor insurance rates.

"The people in Missouri have been driving less and they feel they should have their insurance rates reduced," Farmer commented.

State Highway Department figures presented at the hearing showed an overall decline in traffic volume of more than 5 per cent last month alone compared to March 1973 and a reduction in average highway speeds of 10 miles an hour from last summer to last month.

Capt. Charles Endicott, director of the highway patrol's traffic division, noted a decline in traffic accidents this year, highlighted by a 43.4 per cent drop in fatalities. He testified that the reduced 55 mile an hour speed limit had a direct effect on the declining accident rate.

Five Democrats now seek the same job

Robert S. Leftwich, Route 1, Hughesville, Wednesday became the fifth person to file for the Democratic nomination of county collector.

Leftwich, 31, is a science teacher at Northwest High School. He also farms in northern Pettis County.

A lifelong resident of the county, Leftwich is a member of Wesley United Methodist Church in Sedalia. He and his wife Barbara have one child, a daughter, Lisa, three-years-old.

Leftwich will be opposed in the August primary by Jack McMurdo, Jesse "Sonny" Robinson, Tom Sanders and Albert C. "Bus" Walker. Mrs. Lorraine J. Jackson is the only Republican who has filed so far.

The job is presently held by Raymond Wilder, a Democrat.

Road rock bids awarded by court

The Pettis County Court Thursday morning awarded road rock bids to low bidders on 35 county road projects.

The accepted bids varied from $1.85 to $3.53 per ton of rock.

Fifteen bids were awarded to Leo Smasal, 12 to Howard Quarries, four to the W. J. Menefee Construction Co., three to Vencil Bishop and one to S. H. Bishop and Elmer Lane.

The bid specifications call for the rock to be spread by the contractor on different sections of county roads.

Eastern District Judge E. L. Birdsong said the price difference in the bids is due to increased costs of transporting the rock to road projects in outlying areas.

Portuguese rebels topple government

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Rebellious soldiers pledging a return to democracy and peace in Portugal's African territories said they toppled the government Thursday and arrested Premier Marcello Caetano.

There was no immediate reaction from the regime, which said earlier it was still in power after the second try in two months to dislodge it and dug in for a long fight.

The arrest claim was made in a radio broadcast late in the afternoon and reported from Geneva in a telephone conversation with a Western diplomat in Lisbon.

The broadcast said Caetano was seized by army units that forced their way into the Carmo barracks of the National Republican Guard where he fled with President Americo Thomaz.

There was no mention of Thomaz in the broadcast.

Witnesses said just prior to the arrest, cashiered army general Antonio Spinoza appeared at the barracks and a huge crowd cheered him wildly and shouted, "Victory!"

Spinoza, a hero of the 13-year-old war in Africa and one of Portugal's most popular soldiers, wrote a book in which he said military victory would never be won in Africa and the government should seek a political solution, possibly setting up a commonwealth system with the territories of Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

Spinoza's views were supported by a group of younger officers who banded together and distributed an underground paper in Lisbon urging political freedom for the Portuguese in Portugal as well as Spinoza's views on Africa.

On March 16 about 200 of the army officers tried to enter Lisbon with an armored column, but troops loyal to Caetano turned them back, and they were arrested.

The guard headquarters, on the Largo do Carmo overlooking the center of Lisbon, had been a government command post. Another government command post had been set up at the Monsanto air base on a hill outside Lisbon.

Large detachments of troops, using tanks and armored cars, sealed off the approaches to the National Guard building. They apparently were acting on behalf of the rebels.

Tanks also took up positions on the Largo do Chiado, Lisbon's fashionable shopping district, and nearby streets, blocking access to Largo do Carmo.

But units of Republican Guards loyal to the government had controlled another of the city's main squares, Plaza dos Restauradores. They were occupied primarily with keeping traffic moving.

Crowds of young demonstrators surged through downtown streets, shouting slogans and tossing out handbills calling for a massive turnout of crowds on May Day.

Texas wheat is lost to drought, winds

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Panhandle's dryland wheat crop is lost, the victim of a severe drought, bugs and several weeks of hot, blustery winds.

The cost to farmers: $160 million, perhaps more.

Officials in Washington said the impact nationally is minimal. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says that with the exception of some drought areas of New Mexico and western Texas, this year's crop is "generally good in all areas of the nation." And dealers note that wheat prices, while somewhat higher, don't appear to be reflecting the Texas drought.

But the economy of the Panhandle, already crippled by plunging cattle prices, is headed for another shock.

Texas usually produces about 5 per cent of the nation's wheat, much of it grown in the Panhandle.

If there had been a decent rainfall by April 15, some of the crop might have been salvaged. There was little rain.

"In this immediate area I don't think any dryland wheat can be saved," says Arnold Prichard of the Producer's Grain Corp.

With no water, the wheat never had a chance. Any sprigs surviving the dry spell were snipped off by insects, mostly green bugs.

Even irrigated wheat has suffered from drought and bugs. "Our irrigation wells have to have some help from mother nature," says Milton Johnson of the Producer's Grain Corp.

Prichard tells of an irrigation farmer near Bovina, Tex., who watered his 600 acres five times; sprayed insecticide three times and says now: "Hell, even if wheat was $5 a bushel I couldn't get my money out of it."

Knowledgeable producers forecast a Texas wheat crop of less than 50 million bushels, about half the 1973 harvest.

"When we have a wheat loss in Texas it touches everybody somewhere — this is spending money," says Bill Nelson, executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association.

Nelson, who put the wheat loss at $160 million, said the loss simply plucks that much from the national cash register.

Compensation bill gets look from House

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House plunged into debate Thursday on a revision of the workmen's compensation law, but stopped short of action after a number of important amendments were approved.

The measure is a House committee substitute for a bill previously approved in the Senate.

The House substitute bill is a stronger bill than that approved by the Senate. However, three amendments approved by the House Thursday would remove provisions of the House substitute favored by most members of the workmen's compensation committee.

One approved amendment would provide that employers of more than five employees would be subject to the provisions of the act rather than two or more as favored by the bill's sponsor, Rep. Fred Williams, D-St. Louis, and other members of the Workmen's Compensation Committee.

Another amendment would exempt employers of domestic or farm workers who have payrolls of less than $2,500 a year.

Rep. Vic Downing, D-Bragg City, sponsor of the amendment, said farmers who hire "two or three hands for two or three weeks" should not be forced to cover their employees under workmen's compensation.

A permanent committee of the legislature to study the workman's compensation law and make recommendations for its improvement was deleted by the House.

The Senate bill had not provided for that committee.

In the Senate, Sen. Earl Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, said, "We have done the wrong thing in the wrong way so many times that doing the right thing in the wrong way would be an improvement."

But Blackwell's argument didn't sway the Missouri Senate as it voted 21-13 to send a bill back to the House.

Several factors in oil profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Higher crude oil prices, better profit margins overseas and accounting procedures figure highly in the record profits being posted by the oil companies.

This week the major petroleum companies began reporting big profit levels for the first three months of 1974 to the hue and cry of many Americans who felt the oil giants were "getting fat off the energy crisis."

In some ways, what's happened parallels what happens to a homeowner with food stored in a freezer in a time of rising prices. To the homeowner, he's saving money; to the oil companies, they're making money.

Texaco Inc., the nation's No. 2 oil company in terms of 1973 sales, attributed nearly half of its $589 million first-quarter profits to "the freezer effect" — known as inventory profits.

They develop this way: Most oil companies overseas use an accounting system known as FIFO — "first in, first out." Under this system the profit margin is determined by comparing an item's original cost with the cost of replacing it after it is sold. The difference is the profit.

During the first three months of 1974, the oil companies were selling a lot of oil which had been "in the pipeline" since its acquisition at cheaper, pre-crisis levels. But since the cost to replace it is a lot higher now, the companies call that profit. "Inventory profits almost tell you the whole story," says oil expert and economist Prof. Maurice Adelman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in explaining why oil profits had skyrocketed. "These windfall profits happen without being arranged or contrived."

When the oil producing nations quadrupled the price of crude oil last year, the value of the petroleum held by the companies greatly increased as well, Adelman said. This petroleum, he added, was located in tankers, pipelines, storage tanks and refineries.

Of course, there were other reasons beyond inventory profits. Most of the oil profits come from standard, built-in sales margins. Then there were higher crude prices, and some foreign countries allowed firms with overseas operations to improve retail profits.

In addition, some companies reduced gross profits by using conservative accounting procedures to place substantial amounts of money in reserve in case higher taxes and costlier crude charges are tacked on retroactively.

Analysts and oil men also point to increased crude prices for the earnings gain. Companies with direct access to crude reserves found they could get a lot more per barrel after the producing nations and world demand pushed prices higher.

Minor injuries from rear-end collision

A Smithton woman apparently suffered only minor injuries in a two-car accident at 3:50 p.m. Wednesday at Highway 50 and Route TT.

Martha Ann Fields, 37, Route Smithton, was traveling east on 50 and attempted to make a left turn off of the highway when her car was struck in the rear by a car driven by Jay Drew Teter, 17, also of Route 1, Smithton.

According to the Highway Patrol, the accident occurred when Teter, also traveling east on 50, pulled out to pass a car in front of him which was signaling a right turn, and struck the Fields' vehicle, which was immediately in front of the other car and making a left turn.

Teter was given a summons for improper passing. The Fields woman was taken to Bothwell Hospital, where she was examined and released.

Chamber President Jake Siragusa suggested the revival of "Sedalia caravans" in which carloads of Sedalians would journey to area towns and inform them of activities scheduled for the Fair.

Rambo's good thoughts lead to good things

By JOAN CROSBY

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Dack Rambo is a positive thinker, a fellow who thinks good thoughts and often has good things happen to him as a result.

For instance, his car broke down and he tried to hitch a ride on Wilshire Boulevard to no avail. A bus came along and he hopped on it. Unfortunately, it required exact change for the fare and Dack didn't have it. An elderly woman heard the conversation between Dack and the bus driver and loaned him the fare.

An elderly woman is involved in his TV life, too, the wonderful Jeanette Nolan in her Dirty Sally characterization. Dack plays Pike, the headstrong young man traveling to California with the old lady.

Dack is appearing in his third nighttime series, and his fourth series if you count a soap, Never Too Young. He was discovered, along with his twin brother Dirk (killed in a car crash seven years ago), by Loretta Young who immediately cast the boys as her son on her TV show.

After military service and the soap opera, Dack wound up playing Walter Brennan's grandson in The Guns of Will Sonnett.

He's a serious young actor, who is involved in an acting workshop to hone his craft. He also is interested in musical comedy and is with David Craig's workshop (Craig is married to Nancy Walker).

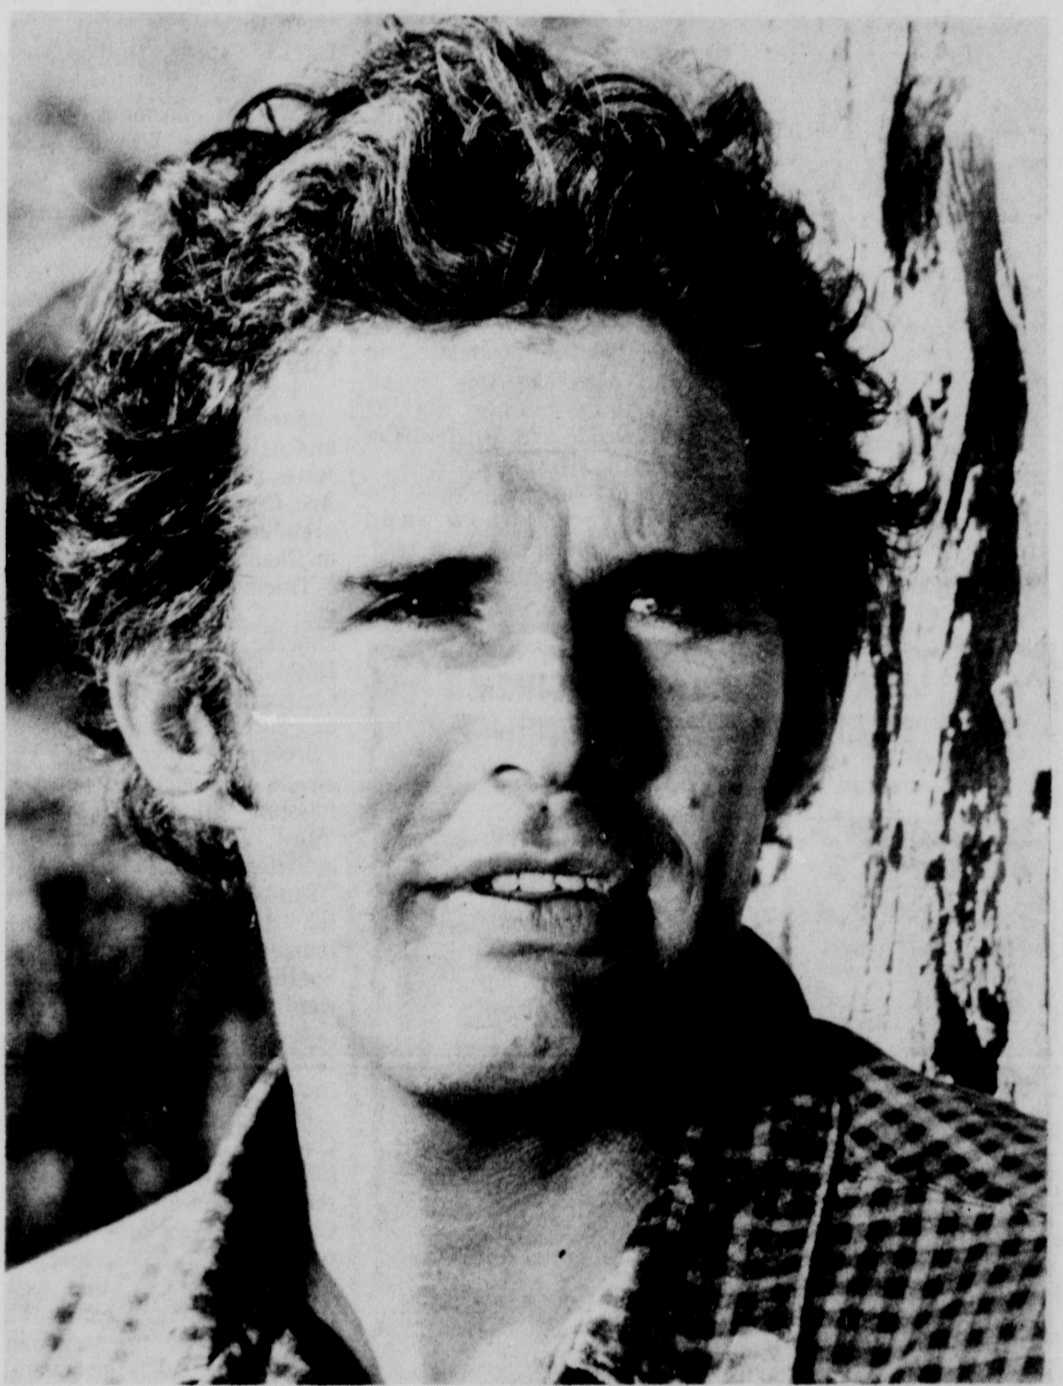

"People like Rock Hudson, Eleanor Parker and Paul Sands are in the class and I keep thinking, 'What am I going to do?'"

Dack is single and a private person.

"I used to think it was great when you reached a certain success and were in demand for parties. But I find I hate all that and really don't want to socialize much."

As for his future as a husband, he says, "I'll never get married. I'm too selfish. Also," and he smiles, "I haven't yet met the girl I would want to marry. The more I think of it, the less I want to marry. But then, I'd love to have kids. My brother has three and I love them but there are even times when I'm glad they are his, not mine."

Not one to toady, when you ask Dack how big a success he wants, he answers, "I want to become enormously rich and be as big a star as I can, like Robert Redford."

Emily is very happy with her role as nurse on TV

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Emily McLaughlin is now well into her 11th year playing Nurse Jessie Brewer on ABC's top-rated daytime serial, General Hospital. Some people would be climbing the walls by now but not Emily.

She's very happy playing the part and she's very happy being on the same show for 11 years.

"It gives me," she says, "the financial and emotional security I seem to need."

I posed a hypothetical question for her — suppose she got a big offer to do a part on a nighttime series would she give up General Hospital to take it?

She said she doubted that she would make the switch. Her present lifestyle agrees with her, she says.

She's up every morning at 5:30, so she'll be at the studio by 7, ready to go. She drinks a cup of tea in the car as she drives to work — there's even a place on the console between the front seats for her tea cup to fit.

They start rehearsing at 7, and have a "lunch" break between 8:30 and 9:30. She show is taped at one in the afternoon and then they rehearse the next day's script. She's home in plenty of time to have dinner and spend the evening with her son, Bobby, 16, whose father is her ex-husband, Robert Lansing.

It's a schedule some might find difficult but she's been doing it so long she's grown accustomed to the pace.

She also feels the work is more important than many people in Hollywood's movie and TV businesses give it credit for being.

"It's hard, here in Los Angeles," she says, "to realize what an impact the daytime shows have outside this area."

"To the people who watch our show, I am more than just a performer — I am almost a neighbor. Not long ago, I was on vacation and I dieted. When I came back I wore a new wig. My viewers wouldn't hear of it — there were so many complaints that I had to go back to my old hair-do."

She says daytime fans feel closer to their heroes and heroines than do the fans of the nighttime series. She says they have no hesitation about coming up to her and saying, "Hi, Jessie."

"And they all want to know when I'm going to marry Steve (John Berardino, her costar)," she says. (The answer to that one, incidentally, is never — their marriage would kill the show.)

Not long ago, Emily went to Birmingham, Ala., on a promotional trip and got first-hand experience on the impact of the show. She says it was "madness."

TV Scout Reports

Courtroom scenes for NBC-TV's World Premiere film from Universal, "The Execution of Private Slovak," were shot aboard the Queen Mary, berthed in Long Beach, Calif.

Co-producer Richard Levinson (with William Link) says, "One of the ballrooms on the ship looked more like the large room where the court martial was actually held than anything we had at Universal."

One thing European filmmakers do which they should do here is that the great European directors, when they are between movies, will do some TV directing.

Bernardo Bertolucci, who directed "Last Tango in Paris," said that between 1964 and 1968 when he had no movie commitments he made several TV shows.

One was a documentary, a three-hour program on gasoline. It traced gasoline from its origins as Iranian oil, across the Sinai desert pipeline and then via tanker to Italy. Because of the current energy crisis, Bertolucci says, that show was recently revived and aired again in Rome.

He also made a movie for Italian TV, something called "Spider Stratagem."

And, he says, other top Italian movie directors, such as Rossellini, Antonioni and Fellini, also have done much TV work.

"In Italy," says Bertolucci, "we have government control of television so we're not free as to our choice of theme. But we are free in our use of experimental things and even experimental language."

There's an art to the way the comedians and other guests are seated on the dais of those Dean Martin roasts on his show. Producer Greg Garrison says the seating isn't haphazard.

"You have to spot a good laughter next to the guest of honor," he says, "so when we close in for a two-shot, we have somebody laughing. Some comics—Jack Carter and Jackie Gayle, for example—are funny men, but they don't laugh much. I never use them on two-shots. If the guy at home sees them not laughing, he says, well, I guess I'm not supposed to laugh, either."

Warner Brothers had a party for Linda Blair of "The Exorcist" and—as the invitation read—anyone else who might show up. Everyone in town showed up because this film, which may never get on TV, is the top topic of conversation everywhere.

Linda had just celebrated her 15th birthday (she looks about 12) a few days earlier so there was a big cake for her. When she cut into it, guess what. It was devil's-food!

Ellen Burstyn and Max von Sydow were there, plus author and producer William Blatty (who should be a star himself, he is so good-looking, like a swarthy cross between Clark Gable and Rudolph Valentino—and yes, he says he once wanted to be an actor) and director Billy Friedkin, who doesn't look much older than Linda.

It was easy to see where the celebrities were, even if you couldn't actually see them. Television cameras were all over the place, covering the party for local newscasts.

Broadway is alive and kicking

NEW YORK — "Everybody's busily burying the Broadway theater," Hildy Parks said, "and yet look what we have on Broadway right now. 'Ulysses in Nighttown,' that's James Joyce, and 'Candide,' that's Voltaire, and 'Moon for the Misbegotten,' that's Eugene O'Neill."

"People keep saying regional theater is where it is today but all they're doing in regional theater is 'Dames at Sea!'"

Hildy Parks has good reason to be a Broadway booster. She is the wife of theatrical producer Alexander H. Cohen. She also is the writer for the annual Tony Awards show, honoring Broadway performers, a show produced by her husband.

This year's show was the eighth.

Each year she chooses one theme to build her script around. This year it was actors who made it big on television or in movies but who started in theater.

"Like Beatrice Arthur," she said, "or Cicely Tyson. Carroll O'Connor worked with the Abbey Theater three years. Some people think Ed Asner sprang fullblown from The Mary Tyler Moore show. But he had done 50 plays before that!"

Miss Parks, who resembles a brunette Shirley MacLaine, knows acting from the inside out. She is an actress herself. However, her last performance was 15 years ago, a decision made because she wanted to spend more time with her husband and her two small sons.

Now with the children in their teens, she finds herself back in the business working side by side with her husband as his business associate.

"We're just responsible for the Tony show and photographing it," she said. "We have nothing to do with the selections for the awards but when the nominations come out, people call us and say, 'How come I wasn't nominated?'"

Musical numbers from Broadway shows always have been a major part of the Tony Awards telecast. This year there were 14 of them. Miss Parks said there are complaints on that, too.

"We get enormous flack," she said, "like, 'Why don't you do more straight plays?' We tried one year and it failed. A scene out of context does outrageous harm to an author's work. How can you do five minutes from O'Neill when it took him five hours to make his point in his plays?"

There ought to be subsidy of the theater in the U.S., she believes, but from industry, not government. "For example, a company could finance a production," she said, "with the understanding that it would later get to present it on television. ABC already has gone a long way toward subsidizing theater just by putting on the Tony Awards for eight years."

Stone Age culture topic for TV film

"And Then Came Dawn," an exciting color documentary series showing life in a Stone Age Culture in New Guinea, premieres at 7:30 p.m. May 5 on Channel 9(12).

Tracing the development of the Capuchin Mission, Diocese of Mendi, Southern Highlands of Papua, New Guinea, the film is comprised of three half-hour parts. "Broken Arrows" (May 5) covers the beginning of the mission work; "Go in Peace" (May 12) shows the current activities in the mission; and "Tambu" (May 19) features the lowly status of the indigenous women in the Southern Highlands, and how the work of Sisters and laywomen contribute to the raising of the status of the female sex in New Guinea.

Highlights of "And Then Came Dawn" include primitive courting, a pig-kill, the introduction of people to Christianity, social work in a primitive society, and a Papuan society, the last district to be contacted by the Australian government, which was first opened to the outside world in 1950.

Produced by Stellmach Film International of Germany, the documentary was filmed during the months of April, 1970 to August, 1971.

TV scout reports

Margaret Truman was a guest on Dinah Shore's show, to plug her book, the biography of her father, "Harry S. Truman." To everybody's horror, it was discovered that there wasn't a copy of the book on hand. But the rescue came a telephone girl, Angela Tedesco, who happened to be there — with a book she wanted Miss Truman to autograph.

If you're a parent, wondering when is the best time to start your daughter on ballet lessons, listen to Juliet Prowse:

"I started studying very early but it wasn't until I was 12 that I really took it seriously. I don't advise girls beginning lessons much before that. Until they're 12 or so, their attention span is too short. It does no great harm to start them earlier but it does no great good, either."

Ask TV scout

Yours and mine and so on

I would like to know when the movie, "Yours, Mine and Ours" will be on TV — A Fan, Chicago, Ill.

The Lucille Ball-Henry Fonda picture has been on TV. Just keep checking your local stations for reruns of this comedy about a widow and widower with several children each who marry and add to the population with their own kids.

Confusion

My favorite program on TV is Perry Mason. Last summer it went off and last September it came back on with a new cast. What happened to Raymond Burr? I know he plays Ironside on Thursday nights. — Lewis Harper, Wichita, Kans.

Your confusion is understandable. The old Perry Mason series, with Burr as Mason, was on TV for many, many years. When they stopped filming the series several years ago (after that Burr went into Ironside, which is still being filmed), all those many Mason episodes were syndicated to local stations.

The syndicated Mason series was one of the most popular ever and in many areas it played five days a week. Then someone got the bright idea of reviving the series, with a new cast. That's the one which came on last September and faded by January. The public, with the memory of Burr's series fresh, just didn't buy the second series. You'll be seeing more of Burr next season, as Ironside will return to the NBC-TV schedule.

Ages

Please tell me how old Spencer Tracy was when he started in films. Also, the age of Mickey Rooney when he made Boys' Town. — Alex Corey Jr., Portage, Ind.

The late Tracy was born April 5, 1900. His first film, released in 1930, was "Up the River." Mickey was 18 when "Boys' Town" was released.

No. 1

As I was watching Kung Fu, I saw the name Keye Luke in the cast. I mentioned to my friend that he was Charlie Chan's No. 1 son in the Warner Oland days. Am I right or wrong? We have a small bet on the answer. — Carolyn Novak, Chicago, Ill.

You are right. Keye Luke played in 13 of the 46 Charlie Chan films as No. 1 son. His first appearance, with Warner Oland as Chan, was in 1935. He also played No. 1 son to Roland Winters, the third Chan, with his last appearance in the role in 1946. He never appeared with the second Chan, Sidney Toler.

Relative question

I would like to know if Lee Meriwether plays Barnaby Jones' wife or daughter-in-law in the TV series. — Barbara Frelou, Sedalia, Mo.

Lee plays his daughter-in-law. In the first episode, she was widowed.

Big fan

I have been watching Maureen McCormick on The Brady Bunch for a good many years, about five. How old is she and where can I write her? Please. I will never forget you. — The Boy Who Never Forgets, Pensacola, Fla.

We'll never forget you, either. Maureen was born in Encino, Calif., Aug. 5, 1956, which means she's not yet 18. Write her at Paramount, 5451 Marathon Street, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Slender question

My favorite actor, Sidney Poitier, starred in a movie "The Slender Thread." I'd like to know whether it has been on TV as yet. — F. James, Chicago, Ill.

Yes, the 1965 film with Poitier and Anne Bancroft has been on TV several times.

Kung Fuey

I have heard that David Carradine lives his life in the manner of the character he plays on Kung Fu. But I have also heard he knows nothing of the Martial Arts. Which is true? — S.S., Gulfport, Miss.

David is not a Martial Arts expert. He has been trained as a dancer and he is extremely agile, so he can do some of the stunts you see on the show. As far as his private life, he lives quietly, not at all luxuriously, in a spare wooden house with his "old lady" and son.

'Earthquake' will shake audiences

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — If "The Exorcist" scared the pants off you, just wait until "Earthquake" comes along. Your shirt and socks may be the next to go.

"Earthquake" is the latest in the new breed of Hollywood spectacles to go before the cameras. It follows in the same tradition as "Airport" and "The Poseidon Adventure" and will itself be followed by "Blazing Inferno." These are big films dealing with contemporary disasters and they're the nearest thing to spectacles that Hollywood of the '70s can produce.

Producer-director Mark Robson showed me a reel of "Earthquake," and I can tell you that it's a temblor which will make you tremble, a quake to make you shake.

What they've done, besides shooting scenes of earthquake-inspired fires and floods and falling buildings, is add a new kind of sound system. Speakers are installed in the rear of the theater so you are surrounded by the sound of the quake — the grinding noise of crumbling civilization. When the water breaks through the dam, you hear it rushing at you from behind. It's deliciously frightening.

They aren't through shooting. Robson showed me a six-story building they're putting up in one end of the Universal soundstage. It represents six stories of a skyscraper and it is built to crumble.

All the interior sets are built on rockers, so they can be made to teeter and totter. All the exterior sets have "applications" covering them, so they can devastate easily.

The quake and the special effects are the real stars of this one but there are some pretty fair humans involved, too. The big cast is headed by Charlton Heston, Ava Gardner, George Kennedy, Lorne Greene, Genevieve Bujold, Richard Roundtree, Marjoe Gortner, Barry Sullivan, Lloyd Nolan and Victoria Principal.

Heston gets killed in this film. He says he's been killed off in a surprising number of his pictures, surprising because he's always been a leading man and leading men are traditionally supposed to survive. He's defied that tradition.

"It hasn't seemed to have had an adverse effect on my career," he says. "It just shows you — if you give the public what it wants."

He says he took the part because he was "quite sure" it would be a commercial success.

"Every actor," he says, "needs to be in a commercial success now and then."

He says it is a unique experience for an actor to be in a film in which the actors aren't as important as the special effects.

"The effects," he says, "make it a hard and an expensive picture to do. Whenever you have anything different — special effects, animals, kids or actresses — you have problems."

There may be tremor, say 3.5 on the Richter Scale, when the girls hear that Heston remark.

Trouble ahead

Redd Foxx, foreground, and Demond Wilson, stars of the TV series "Sanford and Son," were sued for $10 million each because they failed to show up for rehearsal. Tandem Productions, Inc., which produces the show, filed the suit and charged they did not appear at the NBC studio in Burbank, Calif., for the start of rehearsals for the 1974-75 TV season. (UPI)

Cautious approach to director's title

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Phil D'Antoni, who produced "The French Connection," turned director with "The Seven Ups" but he tells me he still doesn't consider himself a director.

"I learned a lot with that picture," he says, "and, mostly, I learned what not to do. But I won't call myself a director until I've done one more. Then, maybe."

One of the victims of the plane crash near Bishop, Calif., which killed the crew shooting a David Wolper "Primal Man" chapter, was make-up man Charlie Sorkin.

Sorkin had ambitions to be a comedian and used to work at Universal, conducting tours, where he tried out a lot of his gags. But he felt that maybe there was more security in a trade, so took up make-up work.

He had a steady job as a

make-up man on the Ironside show. When that program went on hiatus, he hired on with the Primal Man crew, and that's how he happened to be aboard the doomed plane.

The star of ABC's The Rookies earned his tuition at the American Musical and Dramatic Academy by working part time as the school's janitor. He was often there, cleaning up, late at night. He believes the building in New York was haunted.

He says he often felt something brush by him in the dark but saw nothing more than a fleeting shadow. But he witnessed many strange goings-on — lights inexplicably going on and off, a candelabra that lit itself, doors slamming by themselves.

After he moved on, the visits of the spirits apparently intensified, and got so bad that they called in Evelyn Myers and Hans Holzer, spiritualists, to exorcise the ghosts. They learned the building had been a Civil War hospital and they identified the ghost as "Crazy Harry," a man who had been the hospital's janitor and felt he still had the duty of taking charge of the place.

Shelley Winters' daughter, Tory, is studying languages at Harvard. Shelley says she has a great gift for picking up languages — she went to Spain, and within weeks, was talking like a Spaniard.

Shelley says Tory has no desire to act, which Shelley feels is unusual in a girl.

"I never wanted to be anything except be an actress," Shelley says. "But, you know, sometimes when I have to get up at 4:30 in the morning for a make-up call, I think maybe it was an evil fairy that put the whole crazy idea in my mind."

Despite age, Fonda won't slacken his hectic pace

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Fonda got two plays in the same mail. One, by an eminent author, he'd been waiting to do for a long time. The other, unheralded, changed his mind.

"It took me a week to compose a letter turning down a beautiful piece of work, and explaining this once-in-a-lifetime thing that had happened," says the veteran star. He tactfully avoids specific identity of the bypassed opus.

There have been many crests in the Fonda career, but his choice of the one-role drama "Clarence Darrow" seems likely to rival Fonda's marathon triumph in "Mr. Roberts."

"It can be an annuity," enthuses the man who first came to Broadway 46 years ago. "I can do it whenever I feel up to it — on this tour we're only hitting the high spots."

"But it won't become a trap either. Fortunately I'm in control of what I do." On May 16 he turns 69 and has no intention of slacking off on other stage, screen and television activities.

The SRO popularity of "Clarence Darrow" has surprised the star.

"It's one thing to flip over backwards and get excited yourself," he says, "and another to consider how it will be accepted by the public. We weren't that sure."

The play, by David W. Rintels, chronicles the life of the noted attorney who surged through the law courts like a one-man American Civil Liberties Union for half a century. With no makeup except some stomach padding and an artificial forelock, Fonda solos an incredibly evocative portrait.

"I knew from the beginning I wasn't going to try to recreate the man like Hal Holbrook does on Mark Twain. I don't have the basic things for that."

"All I knew about Darrow was that he defended Leopold-Loeb and was in the Scopes monkey trial. So I went back and researched like I never remember doing for another part."

Ever a careful operator, Fonda insisted on a preview stand in Louisville — "I said I'd like to fail . . . somewhere before the official premiere in Chicago, which was Darrow's home." Both engagements were sellouts, a pattern since

Another high peak

Henry Fonda, photographed in New York while appearing on Broadway, is touring the country at present in the one role drama, "Clarence Darrow." And his performance in it seems likely to rival the highest peaks in his many crested career. The play, by David W. Rintels, chronicles the life of the noted attorney Clarence Darrow, and doing it is for Fonda a "once in a lifetime thing," "an annuity" perhaps, but not a trap. Although he turns 69 on May 16, he has no intention of slacking off on other stage, screen or television activities.

repeated in Washington, Cleveland, Philadelphia and the just-concluded five-week New York visit.

Though he doesn't keep fan letters after showing them to his wife, Shirley, Fonda voices particular pleasure over the play's popularity with young spectators.

Next on the agenda come Boston, Detroit, Denver and Los Angeles, until June 16. Then he goes to Paris for a film, and on Aug. 12 arrives with "Clarence Darrow" in Honolulu where the American Bar Association, in convention assembled, has already bought out four performances. After that, Spokane, Wash., and "the windup for this season" in San Francisco.

"It isn't a physically tiring part," comments the star, "but I'm aware at every performance I'm talking on tired voice muscles." So he's cut out Wednesday matinees and tapered off on such collateral activities as interviews and receptions.

The show may also be taped for a TV special, he adds, "though my question is, if we're talking about the annuity for me this can be, will that water down future prospects?"

Fonda is aware that he has sometimes been criticized that a man of such thespian reputation never tackles classic roles.

"I'm Midwest and proud of it. This isn't to put down American actors, because there are some who can play classics very well. But I can't. I don't feel I need apologize to anybody that I am limited."

Looking back over the years, Fonda leaves no doubt that his supreme acting thrill was the 1948 night when he opened in "Mr. Roberts" and "the audience stood on their chairs to cheer." He played in the comedy over 1,700 times "and on the last night it was better than ever before because Director Josh Logan told me it was."

Right now he believes that "Clarence Darrow" is "1,000 per cent better" than when it began.

When he thinks about career turning points, Fonda singles out the summer of 1932 when the only job he could get was driving a station wagon for a stock company in Surrey, N. H. In the middle of the season he was released from chauffeur duties to take over as set designer.

"I could always draw well and thought it was a very ordinary talent," says the man who still paints as an avocation. One of Fonda's still life was auctioned recently for $23,000.

A touring star saw his work at Surrey and because of her report to the trade "the next summer I couldn't get arrested as an actor but I had the pick of every theater in the country to do settings." He picked Mt. Kisco, N. Y., because it was near Manhattan. So what happened?

"There was an open week in the middle of the summer and the producer asked me if I knew of a simple five-role play." By no coincidence whatever Fonda suggested "It's a Wise Child."

"I'd done it previously with the University Players, and said I could do the small iceman role in it and save the producer an actor's salary. The part had just one scene in the first act and another in the third — but it was the role everyone went home remembering."

Fonda's canniness paid off. June Walker saw him perform, and that fall he was starring on Broadway in "The Farmer Takes a Wife." He's been in orbit every since.

"If I hadn't gone to Surrey that summer," he chuckles, "I wouldn't be talking to you now."

'Claudine' avoids black exploitation

Diahann Carroll and James Earl Jones

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — "Claudine" is a black picture that is not a black exploitation picture. It stars James Earl Jones and Diahann Carroll and Miss Carroll thinks "Claudine" is a sign of the new maturity of black pictures. What's more, she says we have President Nixon to thank for the change.

"The era of black exploitation films is ending," she says. "And President Nixon has had a lot to do with that. He's brought everybody together. He's ripping everybody off, no matter what race. So the blacks don't feel they have to get Whitey any more — he's already been gotten and so has Greeny and Purpley and everybody."

Political considerations aside, "Claudine" should be a winner and should put some new zing in Diahann's career. There has been talk of turning it into a TV series, but she says she doubts she'll do it — "TV is too time-consuming."

The picture is another bit of happiness for Diahann, who is suddenly a happy person.

"It's a lovely world," she says. "For a long time, I was a success in my professional life and I was a success in raising my daughter but my personal life was pretty much ups and downs. But lately I've been giving more thought to my personal life, too, and it's working out."

She's come a long way and somehow she got on the subject of one of her early disappointments — when she was 15 and got a job selling hats at Macy's in New York.

She was underage and couldn't get working papers. She lied about her age but her bosses kept saying she had to produce working papers and she kept stalling them.

"They were good to me," she says, "because I was a very good saleslady — I could really sell hats."

One of the buyers took an interest in her and began edging her toward a career as a buyer. That would have been a coup, because the buying field has always been closed to blacks, and it had only recently been opened up to Jews.

Eventually, Diahann could stall no longer and had to produce some documentation of her age. She was called into the office that night and told that she was being "terminated."

"Oh, that's good," Diahann said. "I thought maybe you'd fire me."

Then they explained to her that "terminated" was just a fancy way of saying "fired." She had thought it meant that they were moving her to another department.

There have been a lot of years since then, a lot of songs sung and roles acted and money earned and triumphs and disasters. There were all those years on Broadway and then her ground-breaking series, Julia. And now, in "Claudine" she shows what a really first-rate actress she is.
